Hostetter Reports '71 Fund Progress

Dr. Abram M. Hostetter '53, national chairman of the 1971 Alumni Fund, reports gifts from alumni totaling $87,474.77 as this went to press.

Enthusiastic about the response during the first six months of the 1970-71 fund year, he predicts that the '71 Fund may surpass last year's total of $100,750.15 in the next quarter. He attributes the fine response to the work of the class agents.

To date, however, fewer than 13 percent of all alumni have given to Goshen College through the Fund.

All unrestricted funds are being used for operations this year. Alumni gifts, like others which are not designated for a specific purpose, apply to costs not covered by tuition.

College students can discuss problems of the world with great clarity and superior skill, but this ability must never outweigh their understanding of the tremendous power of God.

So spoke Carl Kreider, president of Goshen College, in convocation, "The Christian Reaction to Problems," to students and faculty who filled the ground floor and balcony of the Church-Chapel on January 6, the first day of classes of the winter trimester.

"The list of the world's problems are morbid," Pres. Kreider said. "The war in Vietnam, revolution in Central America, plight of the city, racial animosities, inflation, population explosion, unemployment — we get filled up to our ears with problems and the human tendency is to react only with a numbness of despair."

He pointed to the Bible and to biblical characters who also had problems and who committed almost every known sin.

"But," he exclaimed, "thank God the Bible contains more than problems. For every problem, there is a means of solution. For every sorrow, there is a greater joy.

"Isaiah wrote, 'In the year that King Uzziah died I saw the Lord. . . . the whole earth is full of his glory' (Isa. 6:1, 3).

"The psalmist wrote, 'In thy presence there is fullness of joy, in thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore' (Ps. 16:11).

"Jesus taught that the proper response to persecution was joy. When men hate and reproach you, Jesus said, 'Rejoice and be glad, for your reward is great in heaven' (Matt. 5:12).

"Students come to college," Kreider reflected, "to understand the complexities and the plight of the tragic world in which they live." But the question he addressed to them was: "Has your spiritual awareness kept pace with your intellectual sophistication so that you really understand not only the desperate plight of man but also the tremendous power of God?"

"The prophet Isaiah expresses it with consummate beauty:

'Have you not known? Have you not heard?
The Lord is the everlasting God,
the Creator of the ends of the earth.
He does not faint or grow weary,
his understanding is unsearchable.
He gives power to the faint, and to him who has no might he increases strength.
Even youths shall faint and be weary,
and young men shall fall exhausted;
but they who wait for the Lord shall renew their strength,
they shall mount up with wings like eagles,
they shall run and not be weary,
they shall walk and not faint'
(Isa. 40:28-31).

"We must be authentic in our expression of joy. The business or professional man who leaves his office for the interminable chatter of the cocktail hour may become boisterous in his joy, but that joy is synthetic, artificial, phony.

"Singing is one way to express joy. There are many others. I urge you to lay aside the joylessness in your life and work. Leave behind the deep frustration, bitter disappointment, and ultimate despair that results from confusing your work with God's work. In their place discover the power of God, as Isaiah did and as the modern prophet did who expressed it simply, 'He's got the whole wide world in His hand.'"

Trio Rated 'Fine'

"I WOULD PUT this trio up against any undergraduate chamber trio on any campus stage in the U.S. and this trio would outclass them all," a faculty member said after a special convocation performance in Union Auditorium. Another one said, "This trio is one of the best. It is a very fine group." All GC juniors, the trio is composed of (left to right) John Jost, violin, Reedley, Calif.; David Hapner, piano, and John Enz, cello, both of Elkhart, Ind.

Class Agents Set Up Fund Network

The Alumni Association has set up a small but effective network of class agents this year on behalf of its annual fund.

If you are a former student of Goshen College, you will receive letters either from the national chairman, Dr. Abram M. Hostetter '53, or the agent of your class, or both. You will be asked, urged, coaxed to respond generously to the 1971 Annual Fund. Your participation and gift are important and needed more this year — to make the Fund a success.

John's Jottings

By John L. Frankenfield '68, Director of Alumni Relations and Executive Secretary of the Alumni Association

Back home in eastern Pennsylvania there was a Kiwanis Club that had a pig project.

This has nothing to do with the way the meals were served at the weekly Kiwanis meetings. . . it was just another way to help kids.

The Kiwanians started their project by buying a pure-bred lady hog who was soon to become a mama. . . then they checked with 4-H or Future Farmers and had them locate a worthy young boy or girl who was interested in raising hogs.

They gave him, or her, the porker. In return, they asked for two piglets from the first litter. Since there are usually five or six, he gets a good start on a "herd" of hogs of his own, while the Kiwanians got a 200 per cent return.

This was a wonderful arrangement. . . because everybody came out winning.

The youngster got an education, a pedigreed start in his business life and a potential bank roll which grew fatter and fatter. With the two tiny "seed pigs" and the fullness of time, the Kiwanians were able to help two other worthy kids.

Incidentally. . . and funny thing. . . the kids feel better when they give the pigs back than when they walk out with the sow. There's a wide grin and a bustin' out proudness that comes back with them, everytime.

Now a college education at Goshen is a lot like that pig project. "Society" (alumni, church, corporations, and foundation) pays close to 33 1/3 per cent of the cost. Students, or their folks, pay the rest. So, when you and I went to school, someone helped us get started just like Kiwanis helps the kids.

"Everybody wins" with this arrangement, too. College graduates earn plenty of extra dollars because of their college "investment" and gain a lot of satisfaction out of living. . . and Society gains from their education. . . especially if some of them give back a pig or two to help others.

Somehow, any discussion of the 1971 Alumni Fund right now would only remind me of those happy, smiling proud-as-punch kids when they plunk down the 20 pounds of squealing piglets. . . doing their share to help someone else. I can't help but think that larger Alumni Fund gifts must bring more satisfaction to the givers. . . and we certainly can use enthusiastic contributions this year. . .

Robert M. Friedmann
1891-1970

DIED: Dr. Robert M. Friedmann, Kalamazoo, Mich., on July 28, 1970. A brilliant and widely known Anabaptist scholar, he was a research fellow in Anabaptist and Mennonite history and librarian of the then new Mennonite Historical Library at Goshen College, 1940-45. In 1945 he was appointed to the faculty of Western Michigan University where he offered some of the university's first courses in philosophy and religion. He was a major contributor to the Mennonite Encyclopedia and received in 1954 a Guggenheim Foundation grant to do research in 16th century church history. Although he retired in 1961 at the age of 70, he continued to teach and lecture at Western Michigan periodically. In his memory Western Michigan will name a unit of an instructional facility, currently under construction but to be completed by the fall semester, 1971.

Faith
Now and Then

There is a thread that weaves itself through Goshen College. The thread is: what happens at GC today is in a very real way a herald to the future of the Church and society. Or, said in another way: In the shadow of the boy, you can see the shadow of the man. Goshen College stands for a vital, strong Christian faith; selfless service to the hurts and needs of the world; education of young men and women that makes learning possible on their own steam after college.

But there's also a cross stitch to the pattern. And that makes it all the more exciting. It is the opportunity offered to you to take part in the exciting task of Christian higher education. You as a donor can have a direct hand in the making and carrying out of a great idea. It's this kind of partnership that makes the pattern imaginative and impressive.

One way to promote this partnership is through a bequest in your will. Money cannot buy GC's heritage and Christian traditions. But it is essential to its future. Its potential is unlimited. You, through your bequest, can help assure the College's future, and new outreaches of service.

Bequests to Goshen College are entirely free of any federal estate tax. You are invited to direct any inquiry for more information, opportunities at Goshen, or plans for giving to: Heritage, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526

'I miss Sundays more than any other day.'

The basic facts about Jacquelin Ann Schuster's life are simple and straightforward. She was born October 6, 1950, and died unexpectedly in Port-au-Prince, Haiti, on November 25, 1970, while engaged in the Goshen College Study-Service Term there.

The quality of life Jacquelin lived is difficult to describe in a paragraph of words. Her selflessness, service-mindedness, Christian concern, and earnestness are mirrored in the journal that she faithfully kept while she was abroad. At Fond de Negres at the Salvation Army clinic, orphanage, and school, in her field experience which was to have lasted seven weeks, the many facets of her Christian understanding and discipleship unfold through her journal:

October 30

This afternoon I went over to the orphanage. I sat down and was soon surrounded by children, mostly boys. Alexander, the four-year-old, just stood behind my chair, touching my jacket and smiling. He doesn't know French and I don't know Creole but we get along fine. I wish I could remember that string game!

November 3

This afternoon Capitaine, Briscoll, and I walked an hour to the home of one of the teachers. She's just a young girl — not much older than I. She was so happy to have us come. She had coffee, pop, and crackers waiting for us when we got there. She's terribly poor, but she gave us the best she had. When we left, she walked back most of the way with us because it was dark and we didn't have a flashlight. The moon lit up the road pretty well. Before she left us, she gave us each a kiss on the cheek. It was very touching to me because I had only met her that evening. Only a Haitian could be so open and warm to a stranger.

November 6

This afternoon I went to the orphanage. I spend my time holding little girls who get knocked down, arbitrating fights, rocking the two babies.

November 7

I went over to the orphanage. David was glad to see me. Vinesse smiled for the first time. Alexander came over and put his head in my lap. I wish I could take those babies over here. They are so neglected. I can do nothing — I feel so helpless.

November 9

Briscoll and I went over and talked to the principal of the school about my helping with some classes. I'm starting with the kindergarten — with Gelina. She's the one we went to visit who gave us crackers and pop. She's really nice. . . .

November 10

Today was my first day and I really liked it. It's fun to teach little children and not nearly so boring. Each child has his own slate and chalk and I help him write. I'm there from 8 to 9:30 and then from 10:15 to 11. At 1:00 I go back to prepare the next day's lessons with Gelina.

November 12

Today I helped the children with their reading. Most of them did very well. Gelina asked me if we hit the children in the U.S. She really hit some of them today. She was nice when Briscoll came to observe. That's the way it goes.

November 13

Today Gelina got really mad at poor Alexander. She went to get the whip and when she came back he just screamed. He's only four and too young to be in that class. At recess I asked Gelina if it would be possible for me to tutor Alexander by himself. That suited her fine, because she gets so mad at him and she thinks he's too young for that class, too. So now I'm going to prepare each day's lesson with Gelina. I'll teach Alexander at Bethany, bringing him back to the school for recess and dinner. This way he gets out of school an hour earlier, but I'll teach him for an hour in the afternoon when I go back to tutor Jannot, Idna, and Marie Chantal at 2:30. That way I can use the classroom and blackboard.

So this afternoon I got the four kids together and took them to the classroom. They were very eager — I think they enjoyed having me for a teacher. I don't know how much we accomplished. I think next time it will be better if I work with only one at a time. They all need work on the alphabet. They have it memorized but they don't know the letters by themselves.

November 16

Today I taught Alexander. He was quite pleased to have so much attention to himself. He did pretty well with his lessons — we got done early. He had the most fun when I told him to get a certain number of sticks, stones, and leaves as part of his arithmetic lesson. It's amazing really how well he does do for only being four years old. I don't know if he quite understands the change. He is glad to go to play with his classmates and to eat dinner with them. But he comes to me willingly, so he must not mind too much. He must always sit beside me in church. The sad part is that he will have to return to the same situation when I leave. I know Gelina will hit him just like before. It isn't his fault his attention span is short, it's just that he's young.

Today Major Packett went into Port. I gave her the pattern for some slacks to give to

Perspective on Campus

After the memorial services for Jackie Schuster, one professor said, "Faith was built and strengthened for many students that day. For here was a girl who did what she was supposed to do and was very quiet about it. But out of her death she speaks with a ringing voice to her peers and the profs."

There are other evidences of faith-building. One is the number of students who committed, or recommitted their lives during the week of messages by David Shank.

Prof. Stanley C. Shenk, who teaches inductive study of the Bible, reports that he is amazed at how his students dig into the Bible. The papers give evidence of their deep Christian concern, their faithfulness in their Christian pilgrimage, and how well and how many applications they see from the Bible for their Christian lives. Students report spending up to 30 and 40 out-of-class hours on one assignment. It shows their love for the Bible, their desire to write about it, and the perseverance to do a painstaking job. They come up with phrases that are more crisp and brilliant than any commentary, according to Shenk. More on this in a future Bulletin.

Prof. Roy Umble, director of dramas, reports it is difficult to schedule play practices because of the responsibilities of members of the cast to their small "word" groups. Students give their fellowship groups high priority, he reports.

Prof. John Ingold reports the difficulty of scheduling intramural athletics for the same reason.

Prof. Weyburn Groff, of the Goshen Biblical Seminary, reports a list of some 70 college students, freshmen through seniors, interested in the possibility of seminary study. The list, usually submitted by professors who recommend students to be contacted, this year included a number of persons who went to professors and requested that they promise to place their names on it.

Prof. John Ingold also reports the findings of a recent study comparing the values between seniors at Goshen College and seniors at Michigan State University. Twice as many GC seniors as Michigan State seniors reported that as a result of four years of college, they accepted the Bible more than before as a guide to modern living. Over 70 per cent of the GC seniors indicated greater commitment to personal and social responsibility, and greater belief that education must serve mankind. Eighty-eight per cent of GC's seniors indicated the same or greater interest and commitment to the Christian church.

The perplexing question for the seventies

Must a College Be Plagued With Operating Deficits?

Goshen College is caught in the money squeeze felt from Wall Street to the local punch press operator. To a student it may mean working when he should be studying. To a parent it may mean a full-time job plus "moonlighting."

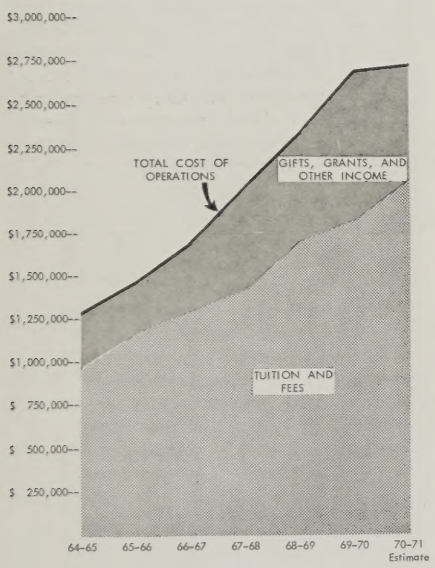
To the administration it is the agony of maintaining excellence in Christian higher education in the face of an operating deficit of $40,000 this year (and one of similar or greater size predicted for next year) and spiraling educational costs. Despite the fact that colleges like Goshen are built on and prosper through Christian ideals, the coldest, simplest fact of Christian higher education is that it costs money.

It takes a lot of money. At Goshen, a small college by most standards (1,167 full-time students, 1970-71), it is taking more than $2.75 million this year for operations. Only six years ago, the operating budget was $1.3 million — less than half of this year's budget.

The record of gifts and grants received by Goshen College has been possible only because of the generosity of many congregations, alumni, friends, and supporting foundations and business corporations. Goshen seeks to maintain, even exceed, this fine level of support in the years ahead. Its life and service to the church depend on ample support. It hopes that its innovative educational programs and the strengthening of existing ones will stimulate generous responses.

Immediately pressing is the need for unrestricted funds for operations to erase the possibility of a deficit. The following data and charts demonstrate the urgency of that need.

WHAT IT TAKES IN DOLLARS TO OPERATE A COLLEGE



Tuition Plus 'Subsidy'

One solution to a shortage in the operations budget is higher tuition. But as a matter of fact, students have been paying more tuition. Over the past five years, the average increase a year in tuition has been 7.6 per cent. That is almost exactly the same as the 7.5 per cent recently reported by the prestigious Carnegie Commission as national experience for private schools.

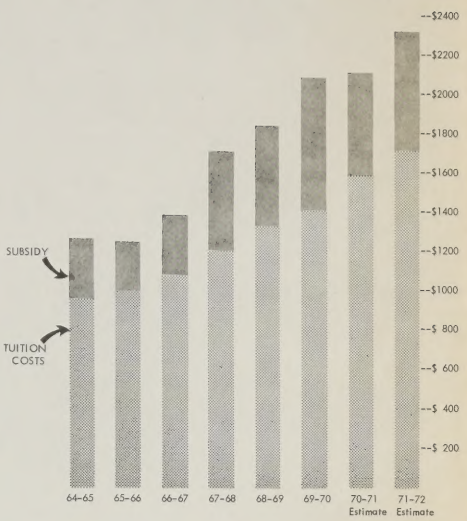
But increased tuition is the woe of many parents as well as the administration. The question is: How long can GC continue to raise tuition at this rate without denying access to some and putting the college in a poor competitive position?

Two points must be understood about tuition. First, no academically qualified student is turned away because of inability to pay, and second, even the student who pays full tuition falls far short of paying the actual costs of his education.

Over the last several years tuition payments have covered about 75 per cent of the student's educational costs. Each undergraduate paying full tuition at Goshen this year receives, in effect, a $525 tuition "subsidy." While this is substantial, it is less than the average for private institutions and considerably below the subsidy provided through taxes at state universities. Tuition at Goshen College is now $1590, but the cost per student is $2115. (Room and board, not included in the cost figures here, do not require "subsidy" at GC; residence halls, dining facilities, and similar services are self-supporting.)

Unrestricted gifts, plus those designated specifically for operations, provide the "subsidy," or fill the gap between what a student pays (tuition income for the college), and total educational expenses. Gifts help Goshen combat steadily rising costs. They have been strategic in enabling Goshen to serve record numbers of students intent on obtaining Christian higher education. Goshen could never have become a college of high purposes that it is today if it had not been for those gifts.

TUITION COSTS INCREASE, BUT EVERY STUDENT ALWAYS RECEIVES A SUBSIDY



But there is more to the story.

Recent Experience and Current Needs

Not too many years ago Goshen had a vigorous building program. A beautiful library, two spacious residence halls, enlargement of the physical plant building and heating plant, landscaping, and extensive renovation of the Administration Building were among the additions to the campus. They provided the facilities for a growing student body and economical, year-round operation.

Today, with the Study-Service Term abroad, pressure has temporarily subsided for building new classroom buildings and residence

> Sandy. I decided I wouldn't be able to go into Port because of Alexander. I didn't want him to have to go back into the class for a week just after we had gotten started.

Memorial Services Held at College

Prof. J. R. Burkholder, campus pastor, who led in the memorial service at Goshen College on November 30, said, "I did not have the privilege of knowing Jackie Schuster. I use those words deliberately: 'I did not have the privilege of knowing Jackie . . .' and the loss is mine. For in these few days, I have gained from those who did know her a profound impression of one who lived close to God, a beautiful example of a life open to the Eternal. In simple and direct terms, she intended to express her faith in work among the suffering peoples of this earth. She was happily and selflessly involved in such service when fatal illness suddenly struck her down."

Jackie was preparing to be an elementary schoolteacher and had overseas mission service in mind.

Her journal shows a girl with deeply religious motives, one who communed with God and lived close to the life of the church and its outreach:

> September 22
> (On the way back from the fort near Kenscoff, Haiti, she stopped at a market.) I got a long skirt and a bag to carry on the plane — also a book of prayers.
> October 18
> Today we went to Grande Messe (High Mass) with our mother. We met the father who gave us the lecture on the Episcopal Church in Haiti. The organ was really beautiful. The creed and liturgy reminded me of my Lutheran Church at home. They even sang some hymns I knew. It was nice.

"Our mother," to whom she refers, was the mother in the family who provided room and two meals a day in the home in which she and Sandy Hess were guests while in Port-au-Prince.

> November 15
> How glad I shall be to worship in a Lutheran Church once more. I miss Sundays more than any other day. I sat with the children. They all rushed to sit beside me when I sat down. It made me feel good. Major Packett gives the sermon, which I can't understand. Half the service is taken up by roll call and offering. It surprised me at first, but then it's just like giving offering envelopes. I like to listen to the hymns on the radio because they are familiar.

When there was a question in early November about whether she should stay at Fond de Negres for the seven-week field experience, she wrote:

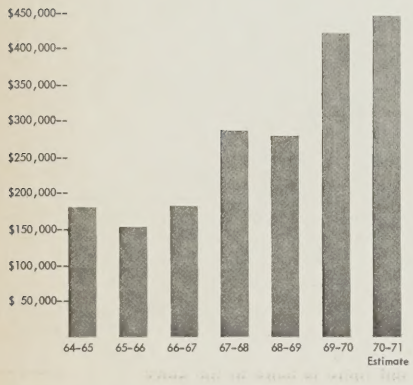
> . . . Briscoll and I talked about the service project and the possibility of changing me. I think Briscoll really wants me to stay. She said I had helped her by my company to get over her discouragements. I think I will get to stay— I have trust in God's promise.

There is another example of the Jackie who constantly thought of others and their happiness:

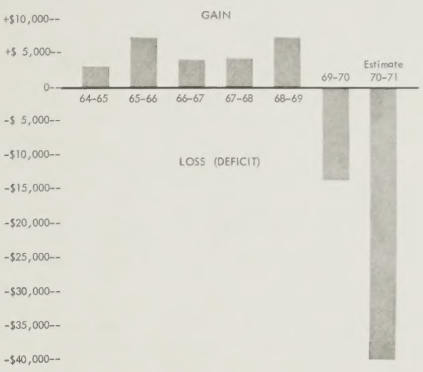
halls, because 50 to 130 students are off campus each trimester. But just as basic a reason for the absence of a program to build urgently needed facilities is: In Goshen's present financial condition it would be unwise to build. And, when the next buildings go up, donors will have to be found to provide not only the gifts for construction but also sums for endowing each building's operations and upkeep. Without endowment, the annual operations budget will be strained even greater than it is today.

The need for more and more tuition "subsidy" to close the gap between tuition income and total educational costs has dictated that virtually all contributions be allocated for operations. Plans for new buildings and campus development have been temporarily shelved. So it is that the uses of gifts painfully reveal the accurate picture of the school's financial condition. Until the 1968-69 year, more than half of contributions was used for building; in one year, 1966-67, more than 80 per cent of all gifts was used for building. Since then, more and more gifts have been used for operations. In 1970-71 over 80 per cent of all gifts must be used for operations, less than 20 per cent for development and specially designated projects. Yet a $40,000 deficit is expected because there are not adequate development funds to channel to operations. In this respect Goshen is far more needy today than it was even as recently as three years ago. At that time not only were gifts available for building, but the College was also enjoying a modest gain from operations.

GIFTS REQUIRED TO MEET YEARLY OPERATIONS BUDGET



RECORD OF GAIN OR LOSS FROM COLLEGE OPERATIONS



Many college presidents believe that if a school is good enough, money will come to it. This was borne out by the responses that made the $3.5 million development program, 1964-69, successful. Gifts, from many givers for numerous uses, are desperately needed if a college is to be vital to today's students and attractive to tomorrow's donors. Put another way, the "bread-and-butter" gifts are necessities for attracting and catching the "plus" gifts. Or, unless contributions to meet current operating expenses are received regularly, Goshen will find it increasingly difficult to maintain the kind of standards to attract investments for the special projects — the Good Library, the Schrock Plaza, the Rupp Organ, the Turner X-Ray Laboratory, the Center for Studies in Christian Discipleship, and the Lilly grants for research, experiments, and studies in Christian higher education.

Value of 'Living Endowment'

The boards that control GC and the administration are aware that many congregations, alumni, business and industry, and foundations have contributed generously to operations. For this they are profoundly thankful.

Continued giving will keep GC strong, vital, and close to the church. Some congregations have faithfully met the $10 a member a year suggested quota year after year. Others have given only part of the quota. A few have not given at all.

Alumni who have regularly supported GC are to be commended. Their total gifts and participation in each year's Annual Fund have been of increasing significance.

Unrestricted gifts for operations, covering the many educational costs outside areas met by gifts for special purposes, is called "Living Endowment" by some colleges. They benefit GC far out of proportion to their size. Considering a 5 per cent return on endowment, it would take $2,930,000 in endowment to equal the total annual giving of $146,479 from Mennonite congregations last year.

If Goshen is to forge ahead, contributions from all sources for all purposes will need to increase. Plans for new buildings and campus improvements can be laid aside for but a few brief years. Gifts for operations are needed annually for the noble purpose of providing Christian higher education at a reasonable price. And, more special gifts, including bequests and annuities, are of signal importance to create the financial strength and undergirding that benefits every aspect of the institution.

October 22

Sandy and I talked to our mother and finalized the plans for taking her out to dinner tomorrow night. She told us she doesn't eat much. I hope she will because I want it to be special.

And, she was a girl of sensitivity and justice:

September 24

French class was really depressing. I almost cried a couple times. She got mad at Sandy and me — Sandy because she didn't have her homework done and me because I was sick yesterday and didn't have any homework prepared (I didn't know the assignment). Anyway, I felt better after we got out of there. Nothing upsets me more than for someone to get mad at me unjustly.

Earlier Papers Show Insightful Soul

Jackie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Duane Schuster, of Fort Wayne, who graciously permitted the publishing of excerpts of her journal, also shared some papers she had written earlier. Like her more recent entries, they give evidence of an insightful and thoughtful soul.

In one paper, "Thoughts," she spoke of herself in the third person:

> To all outward appearances she is just like any other teenager. She acts no better — many times worse. (But) she wishes to help, to love, and to forgive . . . . She wants to be forgiven for things she says and does and that she is instantly ashamed of . . . . She looks to God when things go wrong. She is forever grateful for the good things . . . . She prays that she may dedicate her life to God, that He may keep her in His infinite wisdom and mercy.

A paper she wrote for freshman composition and world literature last year shows her understanding of the universal problem of human sorrow:

> Suffering is the root of joy; despair is the seed of hope . . . . Only those who dare to suffer are granted the gift of joy. Only the beaten are given the seeds of hope.
> One must be willing to give frankly to another's need, willing to sacrifice for the other person . . . . Every person on this earth is bound to every other person by his own weakness and pain and failures. The thread is invisible, but it is seen through wisdom and concern. In accepting one's own limitations one can help others with their failures. There is no shame in sharing or wanting to give of oneself, only in refusing someone who is willing to listen, to share, to help.

Jackie leaves her parents, and her twin sister Jennifer and brother David, both at home. She was a member of Faith Lutheran Church, Fort Wayne, where funeral services were held on December 4.

"It is starting to rain now," Jackie wrote in an autobiographical sketch in her early high school years. She continued, with spiritual perception, "I think perhaps it is a good reminder that in life there are many evils and hardships. But after a storm, just as after life, there is a more beautiful place, more full of love and happiness to go to."

Eager for Europe? Consider This Tour

The Alumni Association is promoting a three-week tour to eight countries of Europe, July 13-August 2, for friends of Goshen College, students, parents, alumni, and their families.

Features include jet from New York to Paris and a day in that city, the gaily illuminated "Venice of the North" city of Amsterdam, the spectacular Alps of Austria, a cruise on the Rhine River in Germany, the romantic cities of Venice, Rome, Florence, Bologna, Milan, and Stresa of Italy, the picturesque and relaxing Switzerland, Copenhagen with Kronborg Castle of Hamlet fame, and the historic, scenic city of London. Visits to Europe's famous galleries, where paintings, mosaics, sculptures, and murals are on display, a diamond cuttery, the Catacombs, and Gothic cathedrals are among the highlights.

Also on the schedule are a Tyrolean folk performance at Innsbruck and an evening with Swiss yodellers at Lucerne.

The price of $895 includes round-trip jet fare from New York, accommodations, sightseeing and transportation in Europe, and almost all meals. The services of Dittman Tours, Inc., familiar with European travel, have been secured to take care of all details.

THE INCOMPARABLE SIGHTS of an Alpine peak and a small village at its foot are part of the spectacular scenery awaiting tourists on this summer's three-week tour in Europe, promoted by the Alumni Association.

Before departure, tourists will receive details on shopping, currency, packing, and other information for a worry-free vacation. Reservations are now being accepted. A card to Alumni Office, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526, will bring you the complete story.

Soph to Haiti to Show Farm Ways

William Friesen, a GC sophomore and son of India missionaries John and Genevieve Friesen, will arrive in Haiti in early May to carry forward the work begun three years ago by a team of GC profs.

Dr. C. Franklin Bishop, who enlisted fellow Drs. Jonathan N. Roth and Lester J. Zimmerman and support of the Hesston Foundation for the project, says, "We've done about all we can from a distance. Now it is important to have someone there to take care of details. Friesen will demonstrate the value of farming practices that we've developed, lead the Haitians in adopting them, help them set up a cooperative marketing service, and carry out additional needed research."

Interest was sparked in 1967 when an investigative team of four representatives of the Council of Mennonite Colleges visited Haiti to see what technical skills could be offered to help solve some of the country's pressing agricultural problems. Goshen College was one of two schools to suggest projects. The philanthropic Hesston Foundation provided $9,000 for a three-year grant. The funds have been used for travel, seeds, pesticides, and supplies to carry on research designed to get local crops through the growing season without insect and disease losses.

The Fermathe area, well adapted to vegetable and small fruit production and close to a market, was chosen for research and further development. On visits over the past years, problems of pest control and soil and water conservation were tackled, with encouraging results. Strawberries were introduced, and all signs were go for outstanding production. Optimum planting dates for a number of crops were found by plotting a continuous recording of relative humidity and temperature beside the photoperiod record.

Crop storage was one of the last problems to be licked. However, Bishop found the answer in large concrete underground storage silos designed to exploit the low temperature and low humidity of the prevailing winds.

PROFS. C. FRANKLIN BISHOP and Jonathan N. Roth, of the department of biology, initiate William Friesen, sophomore, to some Haitian insects. The large katydids "bite like fire," Roth recalls.

The next stage in the self-help program is to train a few Haitians in the Fermathe community who have leadership potential. The project will not be considered a success until the new practices and techniques have been adopted by the farmers and the enterprise is under Haitian leadership. It will be up to young Friesen to work side by side with the Haitians in this venture to accomplish these objectives.

Bishop will accompany Friesen on the May trip to get him started in the work, which may last from three months to perhaps a year. Because of limited finances, Friesen can expect a very small stipend for his work, although his room and board will be provided by the Rev. and Mrs. Wallace Turnbull, missionaries.

Students Plan Church Visits

The 40-member A Cappella Choir, directed by Dwight E. Weldy, will be one of several student groups to visit churches this spring.

The choir will appear at eight Ohio churches and at Central Christian High School during the week, April 19-25.

Small "k" (fellowship) groups are planning weekend services and also week-long tours to Illinois churches. One group, "The New Celebration," has sung and talked about what Jesus has done for them at churches near Goshen.

The "Ebony Voices," 20 Blacks, visited Scottdale (Pa.) and Lee Heights (Ohio) churches in late February. A weekend in Metamora (Ill.) is set for March 7.

Six students, an alumna, and five faculty members visited Franconia area churches the weekend of February 13-14 to observe Church School Day. Peace teams of about five students each will have visited 11 churches by the end of the winter trimester.

Speakers Named For Commencement

Dr. Carl Kreider, acting president of Goshen College, and the Rev. Leighton Ford, vice-president and associate evangelist of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, will speak on Sunday, April 18, the college's 73rd annual commencement.

Kreider, on the faculty for 31 years and known to many as professor of economics and academic dean, will preach the baccalaureate sermon Sunday morning.

Ford, described by the press as a "revolutionary evangelist," will deliver the commencement address in the afternoon.

Carl Kreider

Leighton Ford

Three hundred seniors will be recognized at this year's activities. December, 1970, and August, 1971, graduates will take part as well as those who will have finished all requirements in April.

Ford, a native of Canada, has preached to large Crusade audiences on every continent, conducted university missions, addressed civic luncheons and governors' prayer breakfasts, talked to factory workers and labor union groups, presented Christianity to modern man in all walks of life.

Faith in the Now and Then

There is a thread that weaves itself through Goshen College. It is: what happens at GC today is in a real way a herald to the future of the Church and society. Or, in the shadow of the boy, you can see the shadow of the man. For tomorrow's fruits, Goshen College offers today: a vital, strong Christian faith; opportunities for selfless service to the hurts and needs of the world; education of young men and women that makes learning possible on their own steam after college.

But there's also a cross stitch to the pattern. And that makes it all the more intriguing. It is the opportunity offered to you to take part in the exciting task of Christian higher education. You as a donor can have a direct hand in the making and carrying out of a great idea. This kind of partnership makes the pattern imaginative, impressive.

You can become such a partner by making a bequest through your will. Money cannot buy GC's heritage and Christian traditions. But it is essential to its future and its potential is unlimited. Through your bequest, you can help assure the College's future and new outreaches of service.

Bequests to Goshen College are entirely free of any federal estate tax. You may direct any inquiry for more information, opportunities at Goshen, or plans for giving to: Heritage, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526

Burkholder Begins Duties July 1

Dr. J. Lawrence Burkholder '39 will begin his duties as president of Goshen College on July 1.

He plans to arrive in Goshen in June and begin planning for the new year.

Since February 1, when he completed his responsibilities as Victor S. Thomas Professor of Divinity at Harvard, he has spoken to alumni clubs and preached sermons for a number of congregations, and visited Study-Service Trimester units and other colleges to prepare for his assignment.

Lehman Is Alumni Prexy

Dr. David G. Lehman, a 1950 GC alumnus, is the incoming president of the Alumni Association of Goshen College.

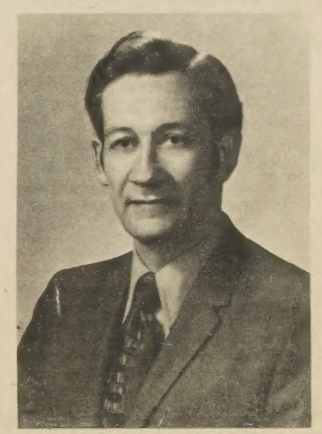
Lehman, an Elkhart (Ind.) dentist whose practice is limited to orthodontia, fills the presidency left vacant by John J. Hostetler '51, who resigned to pursue a heavy program leading to the doctorate at Purdue University. Hostetler was elected in 1969 as president-elect and after two years would have become president, according to the constitution.

Record of Leadership

Lehman is a leader in church, community, and his profession. In Indianapolis and more recently at Belmont Mennonite Church, Elkhart, his services have included Sunday-school teacher and superintendent, church council member, missions chairman, and Sunday evening program chairman. He is an executive committee member of the Indiana-Michigan mission board and Christian workers conference. In inter-protestant activities, he was chairman for "The Restless Ones" film crusade, and executive committee member of Leighton Ford's 1971 Elkhart County crusade.

Community activities include member and officer of PTAs and athletic boosters at Concord schools, fund-raiser for United Fund, and member of Elkhart Exchange Club.

Professional activities include member and president of Elkhart Dental Society, and member of American Dental Association, American Society of Dentistry for Children, Indiana State Orthodontic Association, Indiana State Dental Association, and American Society of Orthodontists.



DAVID G. LEHMAN '50, D.D.S., incoming president of the Alumni Association

Missionary Dentist

From 1959 to 1961 he was staff orthodontist at Indiana University School of Dentistry. From 1957 to 1959 he was a missionary dentist in Puerto Rico, active in GC's regional alumni club and fund-raising chairman for GC on the island. During the two years before, he studied orthodontia at Indiana University School of Dentistry and won the Master of Science in Dentistry degree.

In 1953 he received the B.S. and D.D.S. degrees and certificate award in children's dentistry at Indiana U. From 1953 to 1955 he was resident dentist at Larue Carter Memorial Hospital, Indianapolis.

Lehman's hobbies are gardening and sports, shared with his family. Mrs. Lehman is the former Doris Liechty, a 1950 GC graduate. The Lehmans have four daughters and two sons: Anne, 17; David, 16; Margaret, 14; Jane, 12; Mary 10; and Joseph, 6.

Selected by Board

The selection of Lehman was made by the 13-member executive board of the alumni association. He will be president 1971-73 and continue on the board 1973-75 as past president. His successor, in an election presently carried on by mail ballot, will be the president-elect, who will advance to the presidency in 1973.

The executive board is composed of 12 elected alumni representatives plus the executive secretary, the director of alumni relations who serves ex officio.

Alumni Reunions Set for June 19

Twelve class reunions promise to make Alumni Day, Saturday, June 19, one of the most well-attended events in Maple Leaf history.

Other high lights of the weekend are the annual Old Timers' Banquet (you or your spouse must be a member of '21 or earlier to be eligible to attend), Alumni College, and the annual Alumni Banquet with an organ concert afterward.

Alumni College

Directors to Meet

The board of directors of the Alumni Association will meet from 9 to 10:30 a.m., Saturday, June 19. It will be the first meeting under the revised constitution, adopted at the last board meeting, June, 1968.

The seldom called board meetings reflect the constitutional provision to make the 13-member executive board the alumni association's business and managing body. Purpose of the directors' meeting is to review the functions and operations of the executive board.

Two Banquets

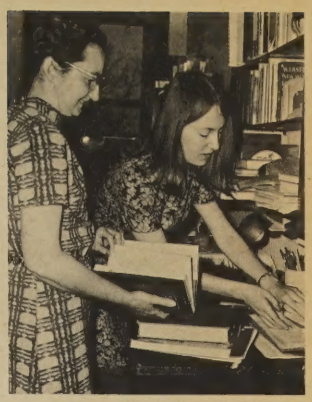
High Light for Nelsons: Visit by Nicaraguans

NELSONS HOST SON'S NICARAGUAN FAMILY. When Brent Nelson (fourth from right), now a GC junior, was in Nicaragua on the Study-Service Trimester abroad, he was hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Luis Mestayer (left), of Managua. Last November Mestayer, head maintenance engineer of a large dairy, visited the U.S. to attend the National Dairy Equipment Convention in Houston, and visited Brent's family, the K. O. Nelsons, of Cumberland, Md. Coming with them were Mrs. Mestayer's sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Ariel Solorzano (right). K. O. '44 (fourth from left) and his wife, the former Colleen Barton '47 (third from left), wrote, "We were impressed with the Nicaraguans and are planning to return their visit. We found them to be exceptionally congenial, warm and personable. Our seven-year-old daughter, Berri (third from right), became attached to Mr. Solorzano and shed tears when we parted in Baltimore. We are grateful to GC for this experience and especially for making it possible for Brent to spend a trimester abroad. We will always remember their visit as one of the high points of our life."

THANK YOU to readers, donors, parents, pastors, retirement home administrators, and others who faithfully send news about births, marriages, deaths, retirements, promotions, changes in jobs, new activities, new positions, new addresses, and whatever else they think is worthwhile to share in the alumni Newsletter. —Ed.

FRESHMAN IS 4-H CELEBRITY. Ronald Weybright '74, of Syracuse, Ind., was chosen 4-H Celebrity of the Month in March, 1971, by the agricultural committee of the Greater Elkhart Chamber of Commerce. After graduation from GC, he hopes to become an athletic coach.

GIRLS QUILT FOR FIRE VICTIM. After the home of Dean of Women Rosa Stone burned to the ground on Feb. 11, GC girls scratched their heads to do something other than collect money (faculty and staff raised $400). Idea: make a quilt. Five girls headed up the project, urged their friends to collect patches, borrowed a frame and set it up in a lounge in Westlawn. Among those who helped were (left to right) Miss Millie Webster, junior from Downers Grove, Ill.; Miss Judy DePue, junior from Howe, Ind.; and Miss Elaine Yoder, junior from Topeka, Ind.



MOTHERS HEAR ABOUT COLLEGE LIFE. Mother-Daughter Weekend March 12-14 gave Mrs. Ray Bair, Elkhart, Ind., a chance to see sophomore daughter Rebekah's room. The annual event is a project of the Women's House Government Association and attracted a record 200-plus mothers this year.

TOP TABLE TENNIS PLAYER IS HELPER. David Shenk '71, of Goshen, Ind., among Indiana's top five table tennis players, worked with Goshen Boys' Club members in sharpening their game last trimester. Voluntary activities in community projects are promoted by Campus Church.

Goshen Seminary Invites Alumni to Request 'Bulletin'

The Goshen Biblical Seminary began separate operation from Goshen College last July, after one year at its new home on the campus of the Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries in Elkhart, Indiana.

For 70 years the Seminary has been a vital part of the Goshen College curriculum and administration. Goshen Biblical Seminary is the direct continuation of the Bible School of Goshen College, first organized in 1900 as a division of Elkhart Institute, Elkhart, Indiana, at that time an academy. With the removal of the Institute to Goshen in 1903 and its reorganization as Goshen College, the Bible School continued to grow. Until 1933 it served only as the Bible department of the College. In 1933 a four-year curriculum leading to the ThB degree was added, and in 1946 a graduate BD degree was offered for the first time. At that time the name "Biblical Seminary" was adopted.

Over the years the relationships between college and seminary faculty and students have been close and with much mutual appreciation and interest. Under the same administration, the channels of information to alumni, as well as for contributions, have been the same for the College and the Seminary.

Now College and Seminary are 12 miles apart. But the distance has not prevented continued interaction and stimulating interchange between their faculties and students.

The Goshen Biblical Seminary, with its own Board of Overseers and administration, under the Mennonite Board of Education, is currently developing its own channels of communications separately from the College, though in mutual consultation and cooperation. Since many Goshen College alumni have a continuing interest in the Seminary, and since they will no longer normally receive information about the Seminary through Goshen College publications, the College and Seminary would like to give all alumni an opportunity to indicate interest in receiving information from the Seminary.

The Goshen Biblical Seminary is now publishing a quarterly Bulletin, which some alumni may already be receiving. Persons not receiving the Bulletin but wishing to be informed about the Seminary should return the coupon below.

GC's late Dr. S. A. Yoder, leader of the first three Study-Service Trimester units in Jamaica, left his library of American and British classics and textbooks of poetry and prose to Mico College, of Kingston.

Thirty-five 11-pound parcels were received at Mico in late winter. Principal Glen Owen said the Yoder collection is a significant addition to its holdings, and that a special "Yoder Corner" in memory of Prof. Yoder houses some of them. Each book was plated appropriately in his memory.

Dr. Yoder, known across the island and beloved by many, got along well with student and commoner as well as those in business, education and government circles. GC representatives in Jamaica continue to receive expressions of appreciation and thanks for him and his services.

His gift was in appreciation to Jamaica for what it had done for him and the personal fulfilment he found there.

Alumni Fund at $130,000 in May

As the Newsletter goes to press, gifts to the 1971 Alumni Fund total $130,000, with five weeks to go before the close of the fiscal year.

The figure is in contrast to last year's total of $100,750 — the result of 12 months of contributions.

Dr. Abram M. Hostetter '53, national chairman of the 1971 Alumni Fund, smiles about the considerable jump in giving. He hopes the drive will top $150,000 by June 30. The gifts will go a long way to help Goshen surmount its $40,000 operating deficit predicted at mid-year by President Carl Kreider.

Alumni by the hundreds deserve credit for the 1971 fund-raising success and rallying of support among their fellow graduates and former students.

Fifty-six class agents have written up to three letters to every alumnus in their classes to tell them about the plight of Goshen faced with spiraling costs and a quality educational program.

Phonothons have been conducted in several areas where GC alumni are clustered. Marathon phone efforts completed as the Newsletter goes to press were:

Lagrange County, Indiana
. . . Allen S. Martin '59, chairman
Elkhart city, Indiana
. . . Delbert Detweiler '53, chairman
Goshen city and environs, Indiana
. . . Gregory Hartzler '66, chairman
Orrville and Wooster, Ohio
. . . Francis W. Smucker '41, chairman
Holmes County, Ohio
. . . Daniel J. Miller '61, chairman
West Liberty, Ohio
. . . Harry L. Graber '54, chairman
Archbold, Ohio
. . . John P. '65 and Kathryn (Ulrich) '66 Baer, chairmen
South Bend, Indiana
. . . Leland K. Weldy '57, chairman
Lancaster, Pennsylvania
. . . Glenn Weaver '58, chairman
Montgomery-Bucks counties, Pa.
. . . William Swartzendruber '50, chairman
Peoria, Illinois
. . . Eldon D. Nafziger '61, chairman

To date, more than 2,300 alumni have responded positively to the 1971 Fund. Their gifts — and those of others coming within the next few weeks — are sincerely appreciated.

Miss Mosemann to Retire from Directorship in 1972

In regular session on May 1 the Goshen College Board of Overseers accepted with regret the resignation and 1972 retirement plans of Miss Orpah B. Mosemann, director of the division of nursing since its beginning in 1950.

The board cited Miss Mosemann for her instrumental leadership and many accomplishments. She set up and managed the first collegiate program for preparing professional nurses in the Mennonite Church. It was also the first nationally accredited nursing program at a liberal arts college in Indiana. Today, Goshen is one of only 49 liberal arts colleges in the country with a nationally accredited division of nursing.

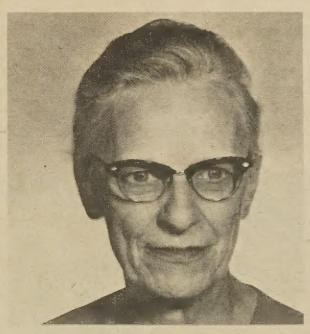
Details of Miss Mosemann's retirement plans are indefinite. She will continue at the post of director until the close of the 1971-72 school year and then be on a sabbatical leave. Her service after the sabbatical is not yet clear.

Finding Miss Mosemann's successor will be the job of a five-member search committee, to be comprised of three representatives elected by the nursing faculty, a representative elected by the nursing students, and a representative of the administration. The committee will begin its work this summer.

Under Miss Mosemann's guidance, the division of nursing has grown from two faculty and eight students to ten full-time and three part-time faculty and 176 students. Today, there are 525 graduates of the division. Their record of 97.5 per cent passing the state board exams for licensure on the first attempt is in contrast to the national average of 85 per cent.

Set Up Course of Study

Before the division admitted its first student in 1950, Miss Mosemann set up the course of studies, prepared contracts for health agencies to accept nursing students to use their clinical facilities, and obtained state accreditation of the program. In addition to a heavy administrative load, she taught fundamentals of nursing and surgical nursing in the division's fledgling years.



MISS ORPAH B. MOSEMANN, director of the division of nursing since its founding in 1950

Miss Mosemann led the nursing faculty in drawing up its statement of philosophy, emphasizing that Christian faith and service to one's fellow man can be related in professional nursing and to all of life. The board credited Miss Mosemann for her stand that the Christian nurse has something of extra value to contribute to the profession. Graduates serve on every continent, in mission hospitals and health agencies, as well as among deprived Americans, including Appalachia's natives and Indians on reservations. During her round-the-world trip in 1963-64, she not only was a consultant at many hospitals, but also visited many graduates to encourage them in medical missions.

She also led the nursing faculty as it obtained national accreditation for the division twice: first, for the four-year program leading to the B.S. in Nursing degree; second, for the program leading to the same degree but for R.N.'s who obtained their technical training at hospital schools of nursing.

In the last 20 years the nursing course has been revised many times to be at the forefront of technique and progressive educational practice. Miss Mosemann built a program based on a broad spread of knowledge including much more than nursing procedures. It is recognized as basic for further study and specialization in nursing on the graduate level. It has emphasized that the professional nurse be qualified for critical decision-making.

Secured Many Grants

To Miss Mosemann's credit is a variety of grants to help nursing students finance their education. She won for Goshen College state traineeships plus a sizable mental health grant with several renewals from the National Institute of Health.

Her colleagues praise her for her astute perception of administrative problems and strength in nursing public relations. She is an active member and a former office holder in state, district, and denomination-wide boards and professional associations.

She is a former first vice-president, member of the board, member of the legislative committee, and member of Educators, Administrators, Consultants, and Teachers (EACT) of the Indiana State Nurses' Association, as well as committee member of its District 12 organization. She is a former president and secretary of the Indiana State Board of Nurses' Registration and Nursing Education and accreditation visitor for the National League for Nursing.

She is a member of the American Association of Deans of College and University Schools of Nursing and was a member of the Indiana Commission on Nursing for its special study of nursing needs in Indiana. She has been consulted by several liberal arts colleges desiring to set up baccalaureate nursing programs.

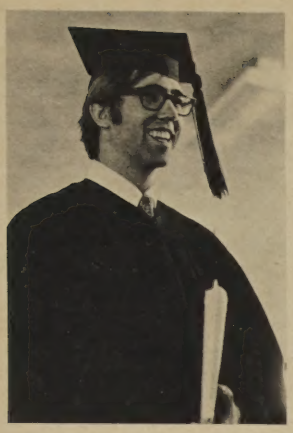
Miss Mosemann is a member and former secretary of the Association of Mennonite Hospitals and Homes and a former editor of "The Christian Nurse" of the Mennonite Nurses Association.

Pennsylvania Native

Miss Mosemann is a native of Lancaster, Pa., and received her nursing diploma from Lancaster General Hospital in 1938. She was graduated from Case Western Reserve University with the B.S. in Nursing degree in 1950 and from University of Minnesota with the M.Ed. degree in 1956. She took post-master's work in nursing education at Indiana University and the University of Maine.

Before joining the Goshen College faculty, she held first staff, then supervisory and administrative positions at Lancaster General Hospital. During World War II she was Civilian Public Service camp nurse under Mennonite Central Committee assignment at Galax, Va., and Three Rivers, Calif. She was also acting director of La Junta (Colo.) Mennonite Hospital for a brief period.

Goal Is Reached: Graduation, 1971



(Left) ALL OVER BUT THE SHOUTING. Carroll F. ("Mike") Haines Jr., is a natural science major from Lansdale, Pa. He was one of 302 seniors recognized at the seventy-third annual commencement and one of the 190 graduates who elected the Study-Service Trimester. Fulfilling the international education term abroad was optional for the class of 1971, but is a requirement for the graduates of 1972.

(Right) KREIDER PREACHES BACCALAUREATE. President Carl Kreider preached a fast moving baccalaureate sermon Sunday morning, April 18, in a filled to capacity Church-Chapel. In "The Prophet and the Son," he compared the current day with the days of John the Baptist and Jesus.

"The day," Kreider said, "calls for prophets who will be fearless to speak out — even against the will of the great silent majority — and who will perceive clearly truth from falsehood, sincerity from sham, true patriotism from chauvinism and jingoism."

He credited the current student generation with bringing forth a much needed revival of prophecy. "But," he said, "the Bible makes it abundantly clear that the prophet at his greatest is vastly inferior to the Son, Jesus. The prophet apart from the Son is doomed to defeat.

"Your model should be the Son, not the prophet, regardless of how attractive he appears. Though God has spoken in many, various ways through prophets, He has spoken to us by a Son. The Bible says in several places you can become Sons. You can receive power, and be led by the Spirit of God, and bear witness to that Spirit."

(Right) RECEPTION AFTER CONCERT. Pres. Carl Kreider (left) and Mrs. Kreider received seniors and their parents at a reception after the music concert Saturday evening, April 17. With him are Mr. and Mrs. Jacob R. Clemens, of Lansdale, Pa., and son, Robert G. Clemens, who received the B.A. degree in history. The music concert featured organ works, two solos by Dennis Byler, tenor, and an Eccles sonata for two cellos and continuo.

Ford said, "Think of the savor Christianity could be in our moral wasteland if the millions of professing Christians in America were 'little Christs.' They would make decisions not on the basis of what 'I want' or why 'my family thinks' or what 'my class or race says,' but on the basis, 'What does Jesus my Lord think?'

"Will Rogers once said the history of America would be written in three phases: the passing of the Indian, the passing of the buffalo/ and the passing of the buck. It is my prayer that you, the graduates of the Class of 1971, will say, 'The buck stops here. Out of a world full of causes, I choose Christ's cause to be my own. I choose to be a forerunner of the Jesus revolution. I will seek to embody personal faith and social concern, passion for the lost and compassion for the oppressed.'"

(Above) COMMENCEMENT IS SMILES. Benjamin H. Nelson (second from right), of Elkhart, Ind., is a chemistry major and his wife, the former Susan Diane Gardner, from Goshen, Ind., is a home economics major. Both won the B.A. degrees this year, to the delight and approval of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Nelson and Mr. '38 and Mrs. Charles Gardner (not pictured). Mrs. Boyd Nelson is the former Welma B. Graber '39.

(Right) THANKS, HONEY. Karl R. Birky, Elkhart, Ind., with a B.S. in Education degree and a teaching major in secondary mathematics, looks with pride on Mrs. Birky, the former Virginia Davidhizar, who was graduated in 1970 with a bachelor's degree and teaching major in home economics. She helped put him through first by preparing salads at Goshen's new Holiday Inn, and later as child caseworker for Elkhart County department of public welfare. They hope for an overseas teaching assignment.

(Left) GRADUATION IS FAMILY TIME. Dr. and Mrs. Carroll F. Haines (left), of Lansdale, Pa., and Miss Ethel Haines, (center), of Woodbury, N.J., join graduate Carroll F. ("Mike") Haines Jr. and his July bride-elect, Miss Jane Kratz (right), of Souderton, Pa., after the commencement service. Young Haines plans a career in medicine in father's footsteps. Miss Kratz has been on the GC secretarial staff since 1969.

(Right) HOLDS COVETED DIPLOMA TIGHTLY. It took a 14-year trek, but the B.A. degree is hers. For Joy Glick Hess, wife of Dr. J. Daniel Hess, associate professor of English, it included college at Eastern Mennonite, putting hubby through the master's and doctor's programs at Syracuse U., giving children Courtney, Gretchen, and Ingrid a start in life, and being "mother" to five SST units in Costa Rica. Mrs. Hess is completing graduation requirements for a major in Spanish during the spring trimester and the degree will be official by August.

John's Jottings

By John L. Frankenfield '68, Director of Alumni Relations and Executive Secretary of the Alumni Association.

Next to sex, socialism, "speed," maybe even sermons, the word finances can conjure up more feelings, frustrations, sometimes even forgetfulness, than most other words can summon.

At least we discovered that while on a trip back to Eastern Pennsylvania to address a meeting of 150 alumni.

Some one in the back of the dining room that evening wondered why only some 2,000 of Goshen's 12,000 alumni send gifts to the college. Incidentally, we've wondered that, too.

Almost five-sixths of our alumni year in, year out, don't send a gift for Alma Mater's operations expenses.

Hardly good sense when someone else helped pick up the bill when they went to college. Theirs is the responsibility to see that the next generations receive quality education, too.

If 10,000 of GC's alumni never give a penny, what can the college do? Ponder the solutions with me.

> Cut back. Sharp self-audit has merits, for it can eliminate waste and fat, and sharpen priorities. But beyond a point, it can also create only stagnation, and erosion of both quality and quantity.
> Borrow. Borrowing from endowment or banks is, one person told me, cannibalization, and only compounds the problem.
> Increase fees. Tuition approaches a ceiling what students and their parents will pay. Often scholarship aid eats up much of the gains made in tuition increases.
> Seek new sources of support. Businesses and foundations can hardly take up the slack in the operating budget. At GC they already provide 36 per cent of all voluntary support.

The ball bounces back to the alumni. Those 10,000 alumni who are financially mute can help their alma mater.

We hope all this means a new assessment of what GC meant — and is meaning — to you. The values you live by. The organizations you join. The causes you support with your enthusiasm and money. Including, if a final suggestion be in order, your Alma Mater.

GOSHEN COLLEGE BULLETIN
Vol. LXV, No. 3.
May, 1971

You can't take it with you, but you can surely say how it stays behind.

One-half of the alumni at a well-known large eastern university do not have wills, according to a recent survey. But what does it matter?

Suppose you were one of them.

The court would name an executor. Probably one you would not choose. But he'll get the job done, more likely than not at a cost greater than if you would have had a will.

The court would name the guardian for a minor child. It may or may not be one you would choose. But he'll get the job done, again at a cost probably greater than if there had been a will.

The court would divide up your life's savings and accumulations among your survivors and relatives. Some may need it more than others, but the court will be firm and rigid about it all. It follows the state law right to the letter.

And on and on — costs, taxes, liquidating property for cash. It'll all get done because you can't take it with you. And since you didn't leave instructions, the court will see that it gets done according to state law.

But if you had a properly drawn will, you can provide for your family and heirs, your church, the causes you were interested in, and if you're open to a suggestion, for your Alma Mater. The state respects faithfully a man's (and woman's) last word when it has been put in a legal form known as a will.

Goshen College offers you, for your convenience, a brief guide to help you record all your personal information and affairs. You may be pleasantly surprised as to the size and extent of your estate. Filling out the guide will be an important first step in planning for your estate's final disposition. After completing the book, your next step will be a visit with your attorney. He can advise you of the best way to accomplish your purposes and at the same time take full advantage of current tax laws.

There is neither cost nor obligation for the guide, "A Record of Personal Information and Affairs." Many persons have found it very helpful. Simply address your request to: HERITAGE . . . GOSHEN COLLEGE, Goshen, Indiana 46526.

A climate of joy, freedom, spontaneity, creativity and trust is one of the goals of my administration

The Soul of a College

By J. Lawrence Burkholder

Just as a human being is more than flesh and blood, a college is more than brick and mortar. It has an inner life for which I would use the word "soul." The soul of a college is invisible and, strictly speaking, it is immeasurable. Nevertheless, even if one cannot see the soul, one can feel it. The soul manifests itself in the mood of the campus, the religious life of the community, the morale of the students and the commitment of the faculty.

Those responsible for institutions of higher education are responsible for their inner life as well as their external prosperity. Administrators therefore must not only scrutinize budgets and plan physical development but they must also be sensitive to spiritual forces within their institutions and within the culture at large. They must know what is happening in the minds and affections of college people, and they must discern the "consciousness" of the campus and influence its direction.

If colleges and universities have failed during the past 20 years, it is not because they have failed to grow physically. Rather, it is because they have concentrated so much on physical development that they have been unmindful of the spiritual and human dimensions of existence. We are now at the point in education where we must pay more attention to feelings, moods, aspirations, human relationships and religious experience.

The Importance of Religious Experience

There would appear to be certain developments within the church and in the culture at large which may hopefully have a salutary influence upon the spiritual development of Christian colleges such as Goshen. I refer particularly to the place being given to religious experience. Today it is recognized that religion is not simply to be thought about but it is to be felt as well. Religion is intended to grasp the whole person including his emotions. Religion is a source of joy. Christianity in particular manifests itself in joy since it is response to the resurrection and the coming of the Holy Spirit. Formalism, routine, empty tradition and rationalism are being challenged today by people who have been visited by the Spirit and who express their faith freely through new forms. Youth in particular are finding that Christ dwelling within them has given them power to break many a habit and to turn their energies into constructive channels. A new freedom is coming upon the church in many places. Even outside the "established churches," many street Christians are living lives of radical faith.

If religious experience is "in," we who belong to the establishment must avoid the cynicism of those who would see in the revival of religious expression nothing more than a fad or an emotional out for frustrated products of technological society. Despite obvious excesses among certain Pentecostalist groups and certain so-called "Jesus Freaks," the contemporary emphasis upon feeling and expression is long overdue. We must therefore open our colleges and churches to what the Holy Spirit may wish to accomplish among us. I am personally convinced that the Holy Spirit whose work is described in the New Testament is the key not only to personal fulfillment but also to the relation between religious experience and higher education.

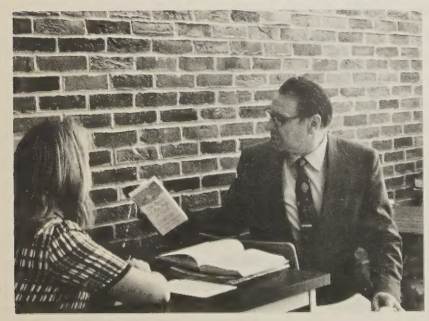
Conversion a Logical Condition for Learning

The relation between religious experience and higher education may be illustrated by comparing conversion and learning. To be "born again," properly understood, is to be released from bondage and freed to respond to one's environment. The ministry of Jesus to a large measure was precisely that. He cast out demons. Demons held people back and wasted their energy in internal conflict. Conversion, whether instantaneous or gradual, is a kind of exorcism since it delivers one from self-centered conflict and enables him to express himself creatively through his gifts.

Education therefore presupposes conversion. Education is a process whereby a person opens himself to God, to the world and his fellow human beings. It is not simply the transfer of knowledge from one container to another. It is an interaction between persons in which teacher and students are both changed. Conversion creates the condition within which learning is possible. The signs of conversion are joy, spontaneity, creativity and trust. These are precisely the conditions within which learning best takes place.

Overcoming Barriers to Creative Learning

Two problems frequently stand in the way of creative learning. They are feelings of inferiority and professionalism. Very often students come to college full of fear and doubts. Sometimes their inferior feelings may be traced to a rural background or an authoritarian family.



KNOWING HOW STUDENTS feel and think is one of a college president's priorities. Burkholder talks with Miss Beverly Kuhns, a freshman from White Cloud, Michigan, in Good Library.

J. LAWRENCE BURKHOLDER is GC's tenth president.

At any rate, they live in constant fear of their teachers, campus leaders and other peers. One of the major responsibilities of the school, therefore, is to provide a context where they can find strength and freedom. A conversionist environment is one in which Christ overcomes that which has kept the student from expressing himself and living freely as an independent person. Concretely this may mean special courses for students who have difficulty, emphasis upon student-faculty relationships, small group interaction and overseas experience. These are by no means new — Goshen College has long been aware of this problem and has made significant progress in overcoming it.

Professionalism is a problem inherited from the academic tradition according to which human relationships are subordinated to professional privileges. It may take many forms but it usually comes through in personal coldness, arbitrariness and lack of imagination. Fortunately efforts have been made for many years at Goshen and other Christian colleges to overcome this problem by applying the principles of humanity and Christian brotherhood. However, few colleges including Goshen have exhausted the possibilities of human interaction between faculty and students.

The creation of a climate of joy, freedom, spontaneity, creativity and trust is one of the goals of my administration. But obviously climate is no simple achievement. It is the result of many things great and small — curriculum, personal relationships, student leadership, church relations, community relations, financial security, religious emphasis, extracurricular activities and social acceptance. On a campus the realities of death and resurrection mingle as in all areas of life. The aim of my administration is that the experience of the resurrection may predominate and that it may express itself in a renaissance of religious experience and creative expression for many years to come.

An evidence of confidence and enthusiasm

No Deficit at Year End

If you have not already heard the good news, Goshen College wants you to have the happy report that from January 1 to June 30, 1971, the $40,000 deficit projected in January was erased.

And, its operations for the past year have been in the black.

Alumni, church, business and industry, foundations, and other benefactors — friends all of Goshen — responded generously to fulfill their shared responsibility to the college.

Total contributions reached a record high of $476,040.12 in the fiscal year which closed June 30. Most notable are:

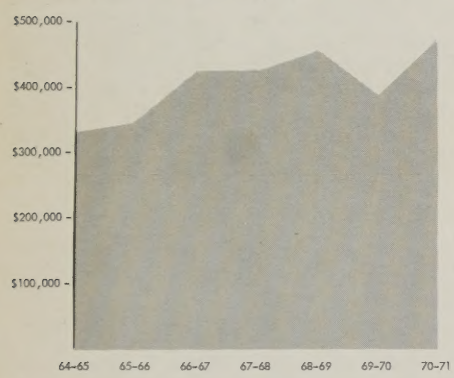
* Alumni contributions rose from $100,750.15 in fiscal 1969-70 to $158,018.59 in 1970-71, an increase of 57 per cent.

* Business and industry in northern Indiana gave nearly 45 per cent more in 1970-71 than in the previous year. Dollar amount was $71,383.15.

* There was also a modest increase in gifts from other sources, yielding, from churches ($146,280.21), Associated Colleges of Indiana ($52,740.46), and foundations ($53,200).

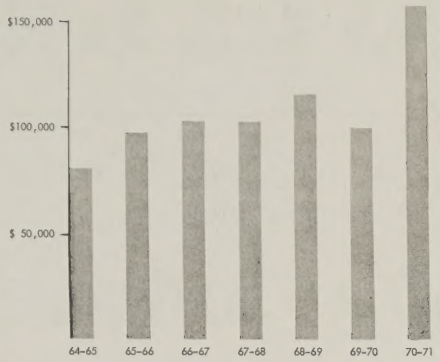
I. TOTAL ANNUAL GIVING FROM ALL SOURCES.

The Mennonite Church, alumni, business and industry, and others have given to meet the operations budget.



II. TOTAL ALUMNI ANNUAL GIVING.

Goshen's alumni have provided impressive financial support.



In summary, overall annual giving increased $81,933.43 during 1970-71 compared to 1969-70.

Other Forces

In addition to the swell in contributions, other forces were at work to erase the deficit. A large enrollment — 1167 full-time students — was higher than had been forecast, and was the largest in the history of the college. The college was especially gratified that the enrollment was so large during the spring trimester, April-August, and proved that with a sound educational program, economies are possible through year-round use of facilities.

Another factor was a judicious reduction of expenditures. Efforts by faculty and staff to hold expenses to a minimum without jeopardizing educational quality paid off. Equipment purchases were postponed. However, the college proceeded to point the brick on Science Hall, repair the roof on Westlawn, and repair the wall on High Park Residence. All could have been deferred to another year but at some additional damage to the buildings and greater expense later.

Gives Thanks

About the year just ended, Carl Kreider, who was president during 1970-71, said,

"We give thanks to our Heavenly Father for leadership and to our many supporters for their generous gifts.

"At the beginning of fiscal 1970-71 it was our best judgment that an operating deficit approaching $70,000 was a distinct possibility. When enrollment was completed in September, we recognized student income would be above earlier forecasts and the deficit appeared more likely to be about $40,000. After the Board of Overseers reviewed the situation in December, it was decided to make a special appeal to alumni and the church. The added gifts and careful cost cutting enabled us to balance the budget. This is in contrast to a deficit for 1969-70 of nearly $14,000."

Erie J. Sauder, of Archbold, Ohio, chairman of the finance and development committee of the Board of Overseers, said,

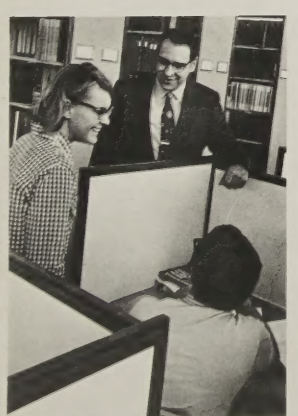
"I am very much encouraged by the responses of the brotherhood. It shows that a new confidence is being established in the college. The church, alumni, and individuals will come through with their support when the program is laid before them. I am very grateful, and I offer praise and thanksgiving."

A. M. Hostetter, M.D., of Lebanon, Pa., national chairman of the 1971 Alumni Fund, said.

"The admirable response of the Goshen College alumni indicates to me that they want to see the college maintain its excellence, and that they do not want to see its program hurt by financial deficits. It was really a vote of confidence for the college and its administration.

Inauguration Set for October 30

The inauguration of J. Lawrence Burkholder, president of Goshen College who assumed responsibilities of the office July 1, is set for Saturday, October 30, the crowning event of a week-long Believers' Church Festival.



INCOMING PRESIDENT J. L. Burkholder with Miss Karen Garver, senior nursing student from Poland, Ohio, and David Slabaugh, junior nursing student from Flint, Mich., in Good Library.

Burkholder, who resigned from Harvard Divinity School to accept the presidency, is a 1939 graduate of Goshen College, a former pastor, and overseas service worker in India and China. He was on the GC teaching faculty 12 years before he accepted a professorship of divinity at Harvard University in 1961.

The inaugural activities, being planned as events of joyful celebration, will recognize God's leading through the ages and the Anabaptist-Mennonite heritage. A major part of the Saturday morning inauguration will be the audience taking part in a service of rededication to Christ and the important mission of the college and the Christian church.

Plant Trees and Shrubs

Afternoon events will center in planting several hundred trees and shrubs on campus, in Witmer's Woods, and along the south border area of the campus. Students, faculty, alumni, and guests from the community and the Mennonite Church will be invited to take part. The shirt-sleeve work will symbolize new beginnings for the college, an investment in the future, and the importance of ecology and a well-planned, beautiful environment.

After the work is completed, all will return to a central campus place for impromptu talks, informal singing, a time for joy, sharing, and hopes for the future.

Festival Events

Among the events set for the festival week before the inauguration are Caesar Von Arx's drama, "Brothers in Christ," by the Goshen College Players; John Ruth's film, "The Quiet in the Land"; an illustrated lecture on the early European Mennonites by Jan Gleysteen; and a performance by the Chamber Orchestra of the Saar. Addresses in convocation and chapel services will focus on the Christian heritage and tradition.

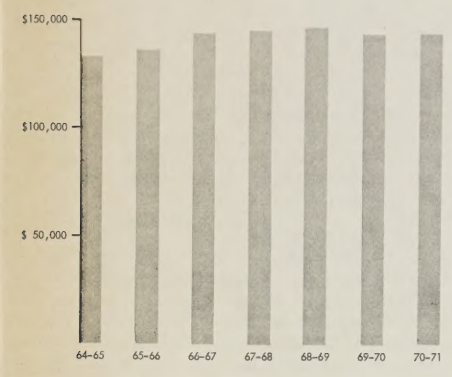
Two art shows are planned for the Good Library gallery. A collection of prints and drawings by 17th and 18th century Dutch artists and a selection of paintings by Jerry Bontrager, a 1966 graduate of Goshen College and winner of the M.F.A. from Ohio State University, will be on display. The 16 pieces of Dutch art will be loaned by the Mennonite Historical Library and Archives, of Bethel College, North Newton, Kans., for the occasion.

The planning of the activities has purposely excluded the traditional pageantry usually found in college and university presidential inaugurations. The traditional ceremony and related fanfare have been a major expense item. Further, students on many campuses have been bored by the pageantry and formality and have stayed away from inauguration services in droves.

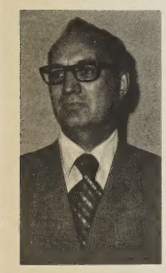
The intention at Goshen is an inauguration that is symbolic to students, faculty, and guests and that will require their energies in some way. It is even intended that the trees and shrubs be donated, to symbolize support of the college from many alumni, friends, groups, churches, and firms.

III. TOTAL CHURCH ANNUAL GIVING.

Goshen College is grateful that major church support comes steadily from congregations in Allegheny, Franconia, Illinois, Indiana-Michigan, Ohio and Eastern, and Ontario conferences.



"When I heard the total amount that had been given, and learned of the number of alumni who had given for the first time, I was thrilled. I would like to give my thanks to all who made my task as national fund chairman so pleasant."



Walter Massanari, M.D., of Goshen, Ind., parent of a son and daughter at Goshen last year, said:

"The complexity and difficulty of financing higher education today is a well known fact. I think it is extremely significant that the supporting congregations, alumni, and friends of Goshen College, as well as the industries of Northern Indiana, recognize the inportance of this institution, and have given freely so that the year 1970-71 could be completed debt free. As parents of students at Goshen College, Mrs. Massanari and I appreciate the fact that the quality of instruction did not suffer during the past year because of possible financial deficits, and trust that the same concern may continue in the future."

Must Retain Support

The unprecedented figure of gifts for operating purposes is a testament of the devotion of many groups to the college as well as to their understanding of what modern Christian higher education faces.

Yet, at the risk of sounding like a broken record, Goshen must retain this support and inspire a larger number of gifts as well as increased gift amounts. The experience of 1970-71 shows:

* Supporters of the college will respond to demonstrated need.

* A full enrollment of students is important. Nationwide forecasts for liberal arts colleges in the '70's do not indicate an expansion of enrollment. In addition to liberal gifts, one of the finest ways Goshen College can be helped is to urge qualified young persons to attend.

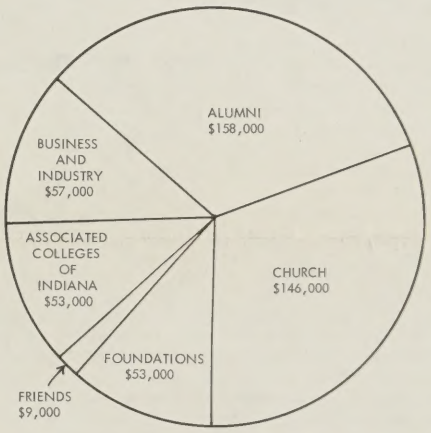
In other areas there are concerns of equal importance. Gifts from congregations and church members during 1970-71 increased slightly from the level of the year previous, but total church giving barely compensated for inflation. Make no mistake, the college is deeply grateful for the level of support. Further, it hopes that in the current period of cooperative planning where college and church, overseer and student, faculty and administration, are setting up common goals, the loyalty of every person and congregation will be strengthened.

Finally, a larger endowment will undergird the long range future. Special gifts, annuities, and bequests provide incentives, benefits, and satisfaction to donors, as well as assurance that the college can continue its Christian service for generations to come.

J. Lawrence Burkholder, president, says, "Goshen, with a heritage of some 75 years, has become an innovator in Christian higher education with its Study-Service Trimester abroad, its Campus Church directed and organized by students, and its Experiments in Christian Higher Education. From this position of educational strength, Goshen must continue to thrust itself into the forefront. But this can be accomplished only with the assistance and encouragement of many friends who will give unselfishly of themselves."

IV. SOURCES OF FINANCIAL SUPPORT, 1970-71.

Many constituencies contribute dollars--plus their hopes and prayers--for a strong, effective program of Christian higher education.



Gifts to Yoder Memorial Will Endow Lecture

The English department has announced the establishment of an S. A. Yoder memorial, financed by contributions from former students and friends of the late professor.

A flexible goal of from $5,000 to $10,000 in endowment will make possible an annual memorial lecture in the humanities. If total contributions are less than $5,000, a special library collection in Shakespeare and/or Milton will be set up.

The English department strongly favors the annual lecture both for its suitability as a memorial and for its contribution to GC's educational program. Yoder, who died in 1970 and was a member of GC's faculty for 29 years, appreciated such special events, knew of their enrichment, welcomed the challenge of new ideas, and understood the unique ability of an off-campus speaker to affirm the significance of the ongoing program.

The annual lecture would bring to campus scholars, critics, poets, novelists, or artists. Topic areas would include literature, language, Christianity and literature, and the humanities, all lifelong interests of Yoder. A guest might lecture to the combined freshman classes in composition and literature, address the entire college community in chapel or convocation, and conduct workshops in writing, seminars in language, or discussions in literature.

English majors and special friends of Yoder have already been invited by letter to contribute to the memorial. The response has been encouraging, with over $3,000 received or pledged. All former students of his, whether majors in English or other fields, may contribute, as may friends of the college who wish to help make the annual lecture possible. Checks payable to Goshen College may be sent to the English department.

Mahogany and Church Call Zehr to Haiti

Twenty-one-year-old Jay Zehr, a senior and business major from Castorland, N.Y., plans to return to Haiti after graduation to give three years of voluntary service.

In Haiti last winter in the Study-Service Trimester, Zehr saw some of Haiti's needs during his seven weeks of field work in the rural north.

Zehr, who helped plant and transplant some 80,000 mahogany trees, says, "I saw that the mountains were bare — that Haiti's once rich mahogany forests were all gone. Only two inches of topsoil were left, barely enough for farmers to eke out food for their families. If those mountains aren't reforested soon to hold topsoil during heavy tropical rains, nothing will be left, and Haitians will starve and die."

Mahogany will help Haiti prosper, but Haiti also needs the Christian message, according to Zehr. "The big problem is voodoo, a religion of witch doctors, strange powers, and irrational fear. I can help break the chain that holds Haitians slaves to voodoo by being unafraid of witch doctors, willing to help farmers with their problems, and showing and telling them that Christianity is better."

Alumni to Pilot Effort To Recruit Students

Alumni are launching a pilot program in six areas this fall to recruit students for Goshen College.

Put into action in late summer after overwhelming approval by the board of the Alumni Association in June, the plan calls for a chairman and at least three alumni representatives in each of the Goshen, Elkhart, South Bend, Fort Wayne, Indianapolis, and Archbold areas.

The alumni volunteers will form the Alumni Admissions Council. They will visit high school juniors and seniors, talk to parents, ministers, and youth leaders, in every way expanding the recruitment program of Goshen College.

Directing the work of the council from Goshen will be Robert Zuercher, a 1971 graduate, of the Admissions Office. Interested alumni in the pilot areas are invited to write to Zuercher for more information.

Pointing of Science Hall Is Part Of Campus Beautification Program

J. Lawrence Burkholder (right), president, and Kenneth E. King (left), director of physical plant, inspect progress on the pointing of the brick on the 56-year-old, four-story Science Hall.

Sawing out the old mortar from the joints and filling in with new masonry cement will help keep the building in good condition as well as improve its appearance. In addition, workmen sprayed the entire exterior surface with clear silicone waterproofing. The project cost $10,120 and was completed in early August.

Another project to maintain as well as beautify the campus is the rebuilding of Adelphian Fountain. Built in 1904, the campus landmark is undergoing a major overhaul through the efforts of the Class of 1916. When finished, there will be a new sidewalk around the fountain, brickwork between the sidewalk and fountain, and the eagle-like figure on the fountain will be refurbished. It is expected to be in operation again by fall.

Burkholder has also launched an effort to dress up the campus with paintings, drawings, and other art objects. Hanging the first works in his office, the new president, in cooperation with the art profs, selected works of color and a variety of media by faculty as well as current and former students. Works have also been hung in the Alumni Memorial Dining Room, and will be hung at other spots on campus as they become available.

An Identity Crisis (of sorts)

By Joseph Hertzler

Perhaps you heard but it still isn't clear — Goshen Biblical Seminary is located in Elkhart. It may seem a bit odd to retain the name Goshen in our title, but the Seminary wants to keep a close tie with its beginnings and roots with the least possible confusion.

We are Goshen Biblical Seminary born and raised as a department of Goshen College and now we have come of age. We are located at 3003 Benham Avenue, Elkhart, Indiana, but consultation and cooperation with our sister institution in Goshen continues. We have many interests in common. Both Goshen College and Goshen Biblical Seminary are serving the church in the area of higher education. There are a variety of ways that our separate programs enrich the other's program. At times we share visiting speakers. We exchange teachers. There is mutual use of the Mennonite Historical Library. And there are numerous informal social contacts that serve to mold and strengthen friendships. Geographically we are separated by a few miles, but our goals of helping individuals grow in faith and life are one. Goshen Biblical Seminary (Old Mennonite) now works closely with Mennonite Biblical Seminary (General Conference Mennonite). We both live on the same campus. We have the same dean, business manager, librarian and library. Students enjoy the enriched program which has resulted from the cross-fertilization of faculty from both Seminaries. The two Seminaries housed under the same roof are jointly known as the Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries. (If you already knew that, you get an A for awareness.)

Both Seminaries relate to their own constituencies and can therefore tailor the Seminary program to meet specific needs. Both are trying to faithfully carry out the assignment given them by the larger church. Both receive financial support from their respective constituencies. (And here's where we are hurting.) Unless you know who we are (Goshen Biblical Seminary) and where we are (3003 Benham Avenue, Elkhart) and what our needs are (finances or dollars) how can you understand and pray and give?

We think you are interested in Goshen Biblical Seminary even though you may not be, strictly speaking, an alumnus. We would like to keep you informed and will do so, if you return the coupon below.

Belden, Ont., Can.

You can't take it with you, but you can surely say how it stays behind.

One-half of the friends of a well-known large eastern university do not have wills, according to a recent survey. But what does it matter?

Suppose you were one of them.

The court would name an executor. Probably one you would not choose. But he'll get the job done, more likely than not at a cost greater than if you would have had a will.

The court would name the guardian for a minor child. It may or may not be one you would choose. But he'll get the job done, again at a cost probably greater than if there had been a will.

The court would divide up your life's savings and accumulations among your survivors and relatives. Some may need it more than others, but the court will be firm and rigid about it all. It follows the state law right to the letter.

And on and on — costs, taxes, liquidating property for cash. It'll all get done because you can't take it with you. And since you didn't leave instructions, the court will see that it gets done according to state law.

But if you had a properly drawn will, you can provide for your family and heirs, your church, the causes you were interested in, and if you're open to a suggestion, for higher education at GC. The state respects faithfully a man's (and woman's) last word when it has been put in a legal form known as a will.

Goshen College offers you, for your convenience, a brief guide to help you record all your personal information and affairs. You may be pleasantly surprised as to the size and extent of your estate. Filling out the guide will be an important first step in planning for your estate's final disposition. After completing the book, your next step will be a visit with your attorney. He can advise you of the best way to accomplish your purposes and at the same time take full advantage of current tax laws.

There is neither cost nor obligation for the guide, "A Record of Personal Information and Affairs." Many persons have found it very helpful. Simply address your request to: HERITAGE. . .GOSHEN COLLEGE, Goshen, Indiana 46526.

All Alumni Invited To Activities

From Dr. Carl Kreider, provost, comes:

"It is a pleasure to invite all alumni to the inauguration of Dr. J. Lawrence Burkholder, 10th president of Goshen College, and the week of events surrounding this important occasion.

"The planning committees, after reviewing typical college presidential inaugurations, became convinced that ours should be primarily a 'family' affair and symbolize Goshen College's unique spirit.

"Goshen College comes from the tradition of the Free Church, the believers' church. The special events in the week, October 22 to 31, emphasize the importance of the Free Church tradition in modern Church life. You are warmly welcome at any or all of these events." They are listed elsewhere in the Newsletter.

"The inauguration on Saturday, October 30, is at a pivotal point in the week of Festival activities. In the spirit of brotherhood characterizing the Free Church tradition, faculty and guests will not wear traditional academic robes, but faculty, students, and guests will wear usual everyday attire, and all will take part in the program. After the inauguration they will plant some 130 trees about the campus so that future generations of students, alumni and guests, as they return to visit, will remember this day with joy." The day's events are listed in a separate article.

Homecoming is the same weekend as inauguration. Alumni will be welcome at all events.

Come, Plant a Tree On Inauguration Day

On Saturday, Oct. 31, after lunch, alumni will join students, faculty and staff, congregational representatives, guests from the community, and other friends attending the inauguration of President Burkholder, to plant trees.

They will plant a total of 137 trees to beautify the campus, one of the objectives in the new president's campus beautification program.

Stakes will be planted ahead of time — along Main Street from Westlawn to the former seminary building, in front of the Church-Chapel, along the drive north of Miller-Kratz residence halls, in the central campus area, and at other campus spots — to mark where the young trees are to go. Teams of from two to seven persons will dig holes, put the trees in place, mulch them, and water them.

Planting Promotes Informality

Most of the trees will have a trunk diameter of about 2" and be about 10 to 12 feet tall. There will be pin oaks, crabapples, sugar maples, London Planes (sycamores), and Shademaster Locusts. All will be balled in burlap.

The idea of a "tree-planting" on inauguration day means something special. First, it promotes informality, friendliness, and warmth. Second, it gives students, faculty, staff, visitors and guests an important activity to carry out the symbolism of life, growth, and renewal. And third, it gets the Goshen "family" together; teacher and student will work side by side, congregational representative beside college administrator, alumnus beside Overseer.

Give a Tree

To carry out futher the symbolism of many persons, congregations, alumni, and friends backing the goals of Christian higher education, the College invites each alumnus to buy a tree — or many trees — or half a tree — or less. Average cost of a tree is $30.

Because of the special nature of the project, the College asks that tree gifts not jeopardize the regular, annual support of alumni. Frankly, if it's one or the other, the College prefers alumni annual giving for ongoing and operation programs, rather than the special tree gift.

Gifts for trees should be mailed by October 20. Gifts over and above the cost of the trees will be used for other campus beautification projects like shrubbery and flowering bushes. Gifts should be sent to Tree Fund, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526.

Homecomers to Meet President at Buffet

A special "for alumni only" buffet supper is planned for homecomers on Saturday evening, Oct. 30.

President and Mrs. Burkholder will be there — not for speeches or a program — but for meeting and visiting with homecomers.

Because of the special events of Inauguration Day, the buffet will be the only occasion for alumni to get together informally, and talk and dine together. The traditional divisional meetings and seminars usually associated with homecoming are pre-empted this year.

The buffet will be served in the Fellowship Room of the Church-Chapel, beginning at 6:30. Reservations are required and may be sent to Alumni Office, Goshen College. Cost is $2 a person.

Week of Varied Events Leads to Inauguration (and to Homecoming)

The Believers' Church Heritage is a week of festival, October 22-31, 1971, and includes the inauguration ceremonies for J. Lawrence Burkholder on Saturday, October 30.

Alumni are welcome at all events.

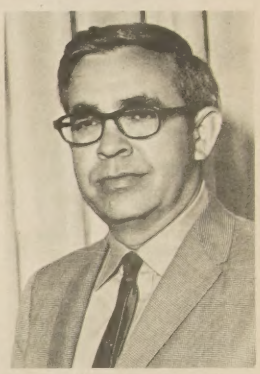
Hartzler Named '72 Fund Head



Robert W. Hartzler, administrator of Oaklawn Psychiatric Center at Elkhart, Indiana, is the Alumni Association's national chairman for the 1972 Fund.

Hartzler was named to the post by the annual fund committee a few days before the Newsletter went to press. Among his responsibilities will be promotion and direction of the 1972 Fund and its farflung class agent organization.

Trained as a pastor, Hartzler is a 1941 graduate of Goshen College and 1949 graduate of Bethany Seminary, and has attended McCormick and Garrett Theological seminaries. He has served two pastorates, the first, three years, and the second, 17 years. Mrs. Hartzler is the former Emma Blosser. They have two living sons.

Bible Courses Rate High with Students

By JANICE RASLEY

"The Inductive Bible Study course was truly a most, if not the most, beneficial course I had at Goshen."

So writes Miss Janice Krehbiel, a former GC student, now of Wichita, Kan., about a trimester of study under the College's religion department.

Miss Krehbiel's words describe a Bible course in which the inductive method of learning is used. With this method, students acquire for themselves, through reading, analyzing, thinking, and answering questions, specific details and insights into scripture to form their conclusions as to what the Bible means.

Miss Krehbiel continued, "The course has helped me not only in my Bible study, but I found that the theories presented were helpful in solving problems with other courses and also problems in everyday living." This is just what the course is meant to do — give students a thorough knowledge of the Bible, and show them how to apply understandings gained to their lives.

Several GC religion professors use the inductive method, but Prof. Stanley C. Shenk uses the method the most. He has been delighted with the response of students and finds them tremendously interested, eager to learn, and perceptive in seeing the parallels between Bible days and today. He has especially enjoyed papers by his students, which graphically show, along with the learning, their pleasure and interest.

Enthusiastic and Amazed

Writing on her study of the Gospel of John, LeAnn Winkler showed her enthusiasm by saying, "I was really amazed at what I read and found while doing this inductive study. Although I hate to admit it, it probably is the first time I ever sat down and read any complete scripture passages such as this. The thing that shocked me most was that I never really realized there was such good reading material in the Bible, let alone the Old Testament."

Bible Courses Rate High with Students

Enjoyment and interest in a study method are not as important as interest in the subject and what it teaches. Pride and love for the Christian religion appear often in student papers. Christina Neff wrote, "I was deeply moved by Paul's description of the steadfast old patriarch who 'in hope believes against hope' and 'grew strong in his faith and gave glory to God, fully convinced that God was able to do what he had promised.' What a challenge to our faith! And how grand to realize that God has said, 'You need not earn my favor, just accept my wondrous gift of righteousness through faith in Jesus!' That's it! It's free! What wondrous love is this!"

Gordon Prieb, discussing the significance of his study of John, said, "It tells us so much. I think Jesus is suggesting to us not to worry about things like eating; the important thing is doing the will of God. After all, that's what really keeps life going anyway. We should make doing God's will our food; this is what we should thrive on."

Characters Come Alive

Interest in the Bible is also shown by students as they pore over characters from the books and see them come alive as real persons in situations that occur even today. As Letha Ressler said, "This study has helped me to see that these men in the Bible are human." Mary Ann Halteman echoed this in her discussion of the Book of Ruth, "Ruth is characterized by much depth of human feeling. It is easy to identify with the people because they are so ordinary and experience suffering, sympathy, and love, like people do today." And again after studying Judges, Mary Ann wrote, "People today are not really much different than was Israel during the period of the Judges. When things go bad, we tend to stick God off in a corner and bow to our heathen gods of comfort."

The students loved Ruth as a character. John Kolb felt "she was first of all respected as a person," and "she literally adopts another culture and life to be faithful or loyal to Naomi." Elaine Strite wrote, "The main impact of Ruth's life is her fidelity to her dead husband. The message of the Book of Ruth as preached through the life of Ruth endorses the concept of constancy in friendship to men and God." Gary Yordy saw another side, "I think the message of the Book of Ruth is that the love of God and the love of man for God is not bound by one's color, nationality, race, or any of the physical factors of this world. God's love goes beyond the surface into the heart."

Living with Confidence

The most important aspect of any college subject to today's students is relevance, and though inductive study is really only a method of learning, it helps students see how to apply Bible examples to living, now and in the future. Letha Ressler felt during her study, "Tonight chapter 20:7-18, means something special to me. It helps me to realize the fact that Jeremiah wasn't always as strong as he seemed to be. He had moments of despair when he was willing to throw it all up, but something in him wouldn't let him. Perhaps I see myself and can compare myself in some of the same aspects as Jeremiah, though he had it so much worse. I am called to be a minister's wife. Why the Lord picked me, I'll never be quite sure, but he did. I'm so human. I wish I could be the kind of minister's wife my congregation would like me to be, kind, patient, no selfish feelings, being able to say the right thing at the right time, to dress the way they want me to, go to all the meetings they think I should. But I am me. I want to serve the Lord the way I feel He wants me to, without asking what others want."

In another vein, Dave Massanari, impressed by Joseph's attitude of "Here I am, here God wants me, here God uses me, and from here God will continue leading me," wished, "Oh that more of us could approach life with this faith and confidence."

Stephen Dintaman, seeing a lesson in the dissatisfaction of Joseph's stepbrothers, wrote, "They wanted what appeared to be better and almost destroyed themselves. How much better to let God dictate our goals, rather than letting human desires control us. And how much better to let the Lord lead through our experiences, no matter how baffling, than to clutch for the things our ego and bodies desire."

Critical of certain areas of present day religion, Mary Ann Halteman, after interpreting a chapter in Amos, said, "God is saying the mere observance of religious ceremonies does not justify a person unless the outward ceremony is backed up by inward transformation or cleansing. The passage condemns hypocrisy." And Dave Massanari, after putting a passage of Amos in his own words, summed it up by saying, "Today as in 750 B.C., God demands not noise and showiness, but the justice and righteousness which Amos called upon Israel to espouse."

Patience in Daily Living

Other sides of daily life can also be compared to biblical times. So felt LeAnn Winkler after her study of Joseph. "There are many situations in the narrative that are comparable to life today and perhaps reading and seeing these made me more aware of how some of the situations occur within my own family or on our dorm floor." Looking at the current world condition, Gary Yordy noted that in Bible times God made the Israelites into a nation giving them a sense of national pride. "Today," he says, "we again see Hebrew nationalism portrayed vividly in the events of the Arab-Israeli war." And Elvin Krabill, pointing out and comparing the state of anarchy that existed during the time of the Judges to today, said, "I sometimes question our present cries for more freedom in this country on the basis that more individual freedom only allows people to do what is right in their own eyes." But Elvin continued, "One thing I think I learned from this unit which helps me to understand today's world situation and look on it more optimistically, is that other ages of history have not been completely peaceful either. Therefore when we fail in our attempts to find peace we shouldn't become discouraged, but rather continue on in our struggle."

Gordon Prieb, after studying the Gospel of John, perhaps learned from his inductive study the greatest lesson of all. He understandingly wrote, "This can teach us patience in our witnessing. We must not expect results always and right away from our efforts. Perhaps some of us are the sowers and someone else will reap. This teaches me not to force my faith on someone else, but just present it, hoping it will take root and someday be ready to harvest."

THE 1971 ALUMNI HONOR ROLL

An Open Letter to Alumni

Dear Alumni:

It wasn't easy. . .fund raising never is. . .but it was done. We went over $158,000 — some $50,000 more than last year.

And the credit goes to all you alumni for your gifts to keep Goshen College in the black.

A special thanks goes to the class agents and phonothon helpers. They spent selfless hours in convincing people of the importance of GC. Thanks go to their lovely wives (or just as lovely husbands), too. If they hadn't been left out those nights to work for Alma Mater, I'm not sure what we'd have done.

Appreciatively,

Class of '11 Gives Clock

Dr. Samuel Burkhart '11, of Tempe, Ariz., on behalf of his graduating class, gave this grandfather clock to Goshen College at the "Old Timers" banquet June 18.

Built in his workshop and valued at $500, the clock contains cedar from Africa, mahogany from Honduras, and works from West Germany. GC's motto, "Culture for Service" and "old main" are on the moon dial.

About the Honor Roll

On these pages you will find the names of those who gave for the benefit of Goshen College in the fiscal year, July 1, 1970 — June 30, 1971. There were gifts from almost every state and from many foreign lands. On behalf of Goshen College and the Alumni Association, I hope that through the publication of this Honor Roll those whose names appear will be accorded a measure of the recognition they so well deserve. If your name does not appear or is incorrectly recorded, we ask your forgiveness and request that you provide us with the correct information.

*The key to asterisks is: denotes Goshen College Associate; denotes Goshen College Partner. If you are interested in more information about these designations, please write to President, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526.

Thanks to you who support the Annual Fund, Goshen College is able to provide "tuition subsidy" for its deserving students. Every student at Goshen College benefits from your generosity, because gifts to the Annual Fund make up the difference between what a student pays and what his education costs at Goshen College.

Your gift may be in cash, by check, or in the form of securities, real property, objects of art, or books. When the annual report for the year is published, your name will be listed (but not the amount of the gift) on the next Honor Roll.

John's Jottings

By John L. Frankenfield '68, Director of Alumni Relations and Executive Secretary of the Alumni Association

Quote Without Comment . . .

March 9, 1971

I wish it were possible for me to contribute to G.C., but this is the second time within a year that my engineer husband has been laid off, so our resources are limited . . .

* * * *

July 21, 1971

Enclosed is a check I've been wanting to send for a long time. If the economy gets back on its feet and we quit being "middle class migrant workers," I hope to send more! My engineer husband is back in the ranks of the employed after a "vacation" from February to June! We learned that we can live on a lot less than we thought we could.

Nicaraguan Sings To Support School

Roy Hodgson, from Nicaragua, sings to support a trade school for some 200 boys in Managua. Hodgson, school principal, arrived at GC last January and began at once to schedule appearances, several in Chicago.

At 10 he began his musical career. Bilingual, he interprets equally well in Spanish or English, whether they're sacred songs, love songs, West Indies calipsos, or the blues.

Thank You, Abe,
For a Fine Fund

Dr. A. M. Hostetter '53 (left), national chairman of the 1971 Alumni Fund, was congratulated and applauded for his leadership and direction to the fund at the alumni annual banquet Saturday evening, June 19.

To Hostetter goes credit for:
* The largest total of annual gifts from alumni in the history of the college.
* 368 new donors to the Annual Fund who had never contributed before.
* 1064 donors who renewed their support and responded in 1971 but who had not given in 1970.

Dr. J. Lawrence Burkholder told the more than 85 old-timers present:

"The element outstanding in your college days was the element of courage.

"It took much courage in the early 1900's to leave the small community and buck the conservative influence of the church to go to college to study art, literature, and the influences of the Western tradition. Your generation took seriously the college's motto, 'Culture for Service,' and as a result you have eagerly and creatively entered in American life and the life of the Christian church."

Daughter's Works Edited by Student

The writings of a teen age girl who would have been a college freshman this year have been published by her mother, Mrs. Deloris J. Pattison, a junior home ec major, and the Rev. John Pattison.

Author of the book, A Teen Trace, is their daughter Traci, who was killed in a car-train collision on her way home from North Wood High School, about ten miles from the GC campus, on Sept. 24, 1970.

The book includes poems, writings, and artwork in four sections, "Love," "People," "Pain," and "Hope." Background material was written by her mother.

The small hardback bound in blue sells for $2. Proceeds go for scholarships for youth entering social work, the field Traci had dedicated her life to during the summer of 1970.

Traci had other talents beside writing. She was a pianist, flutist, majorette, and guitarist. Four of her guitar compositions are being copyrighted.

Mrs. Pattison commutes to campus from Wakarusa. In addition to being a student, she assists her husband, a Methodist minister, and is a correspondent for the Goshen News. She is also working on a book of her own, Peepholes, about a mother's grief.

Since May 21, 1971, more than 2,500 copies of A Teen Trace have been sold. The second printing will be off the press this fall. Copies are available by mail from the Pattisons, 316 S. Elkhart St., Wakarusa, IN 46573, or at the College Bookstore.

Fellowships for Women Grads

The Danforth Foundation announces the eighth competition for its Graduate Fellowships for Women. The objective of the program is to find and develop college and secondary school teachers among that group of American women whose preparation for teaching has been postponed or interrupted. In general, the Fellowships are intended for women who no longer qualify for more conventional fellowship programs or whose candidacy in such programs might be looked upon as somewhat irregular.

Women graduates of GC are eligible to apply for the fellowships.

At some time in her career each candidate must have experienced a continuous break of at least three years' duration when she would have been engaged neither in study or teaching, whether on a full- or part-time basis. At the time of application she may not be employed as a full-time teacher or enrolled as a full-time graduate student, as defined by her graduate school. The career of a typical recipient may have been interrupted by such factors as the raising of her family, personal illness, or the need for a paying job, but she now finds herself in circumstances which will permit her to undertake the graduate work essential for a professional career as a full-time teacher at the college or secondary school level.

The Fellowships are open to women who hold bachelor's degrees from accredited colleges or universities in the United States (received no later than June, 1972). Thirty-five new appointments are available annually.

Appointment is for one year beginning September 1, 1972, and is renewable annually provided the recipient remains in good academic standing and follows the study plan submitted in her application. The maximum award for 1972-73 will be $3,000 plus tuition and academic fees, or, for heads of families, $4,000 plus tuition and academic fees. Honorary appointments are sometimes made if there is no evidence of financial need.

More information is available from Director, Graduate Fellowships for Women, Danforth Foundation, 222 South Central Avenue, St. Louis, MO 63105.

The tour will include a drive along the Mediterranean to Caesarea, a visit to Joppa, a stop in Nazareth, Jesus' boyhood town, and to Capernaum. A week will be spent in Jerusalem and vicinity, with trips to the Mount of Olives, Kidron Valley, and Mount Zion, and a walk through the Old Walled City.

Cost is $990 from New York City for those desiring college credit; $865 for those not desiring credit.

A complete itinerary and information packet is available by writing to Shenk at Goshen College. All applications must be received by Feb. 15, 1972.

Vol. LXV, No. 5, September, 1971

Sugar maples, pin oaks, crabapples, sycamores, and locusts have a lot in common.

Great trees for shade and beauty.

Specially on a campus.

But first they have to be planted.

And a time has been set aside for that. The afternoon of Presidential Inauguration Day, Saturday, October 30, 1971.

Planting a tree in GC's campus beautification program is more than just planting a tree.

First, it is a special welcome to J. Lawrence Burkholder.

Second, it is an investment for a well-planned beautiful campus.

Third, the planting will be done by informal teams of alumni, guests, students, faculty, and administrators in the afternoon. (We'd be delighted to have you help. There, now, consider that your official invitation.)

But you don't get 137 trees with an average trunk diameter of 2" for nothing. And without you and a dream for campus beauty . . . that's all we've got.

The average tree costs $30. You can buy one . . . or many . . . or half a tree. Make all checks payable to Goshen College, designated for Tree Fund. Please.

Inaugural Tree Planting Replaces Pomp

(Right) Goshen College's 11th president, J. Lawrence Burkholder, his wife Harriet, daughters Myrna and Janet (Mrs. Lauren Friesen), and sons Howard and Gerald, were among the 900 planting 130 trees on inauguration day, Oct. 30.

The tree planting was planned because things were to be handled a little differently at GC's inauguration. Why? Because for hundreds of years inaugurations of college presidents have been something the common man avoids like the plague with their pomp and circumstance and tedium. The inauguration planning committee, led by J. Daniel Hess, worked for more than a year toward a mood of creativity, spontaneity, and joy.

Gifts from alumni, students, congregations, and friends paid for the 130 trees, plus 162 more. The money will be used for its designated purpose, because the campus plan calls for 400 trees.

A short morning inauguration service and a luncheon afterward preceded the tree planting.

Tragedy Play Opened Festival

"Brothers in Christ," an historical tragedy recreating the sixteenth century conflict of Anabaptists against protestant and Catholic Europe, opened the Believers Church Festival at Goshen College on October 22.

Written by contemporary Swiss playwright Caesar von Arx (1895-1949), the drama places the Anabaptist doctrines of peace, believers baptism, Christian freedom of belief, and the communion of men of a pure heart, in bold relief beside an alliance to exterminate Catholics and Anabaptists.

It is Zwingli (1484-1531), who opposes the Anabaptists and whose strategy includes a unification of all protestants for a major military effort against them and the Catholic princes.

Zwingli (center, in picture) was played by Lonnie Buerge, a senior from Harrisonville, Mo.

Cornelius Falk, "that Anabaptist whitecoat," was played by Rohn Thomas, a junior from Twinsburg, Ohio. Cornelius has suffered whippings, brandings by hot irons, and exile from his hometown of Zurich, Switzerland, because of his refusal to compromise his Anabaptist faith.

Cornelius, because he has baptized others, expects the death sentence with a sereneness that defies Zwingli's understanding. Just before he parts from his father (right), he tells Zwingli, "No, Brother Zwingli, even if you wanted to, you cannot — you dare not — show mercy to me, since you showed no mercy to Hanz and the others. They taught and baptized no differently than I. Like offense, like punishment."

Cornelius' father, Diethelm, is Zurich's esteemed mayor and a close associate of Zwingli. Diethelm was played by David Huneryager, a senior from Goshen.

Diethelm's loyalty can be to Zwingli or to his son, but not to both. His decision seals the fate of Cornelius and of Diethelm's second wife, Margaret, who renews her commitment to the Anabaptist faith. Both are arrested and thrown into the tower.

The 12-member cast performed the play three times at GC and again three times at Chicago churches the weekend of November 20-21. Director was Roy Umble, professor of speech.

Future Depends on Combined Effort: JLB

Goshen College can be alive and strong in the future, if "we are convinced that the peculiar possibilities of a small Christian liberal arts college are worth the sacrifice," J. Lawrence Burkholder said on Inauguration Day.

Burkholder, 11th president of Goshen College, spoke briefly during the morning inauguration service on Saturday, October 30. Also on the program were a short address by Wilbert Shenk, president of the Mennonite Board of Education, and a response by Mrs. Burkholder.

Burkholder said, "We must believe that Christian faith liberates the mind, that the Spirit of God flows through the creative act in art, literature, history, and science. Conversion enhances learning, rather than inhibits it. Emotional life is essential to a full life.

"We must be ready in the future to submit all our values and cultural achievements to the judgment of Jesus Christ. We must be convinced that we need a world view that challenges our provincialism, localism, prejudices, and intolerances.

Future Depends on Affirmation

"To say that the future of the college depends upon our faith is not to call for a vague confidence in the future. Rather, it is to affirm and reaffirm the vision of a Christian community seeking to understand itself and its relation to the world it is committed to serve. Insofar as it addresses itself to the meaning of faith, it's a handmaiden to the church, and insofar as it seeks to serve the community, it is a friend of the world.

"At the present time the idea of the Christian liberal arts college is less secure than it was in some previous decades. It is abundantly clear that the growth and vitality of the private college today rests upon a wide base of understanding, commitment, and sacrifice. Faculty, students, church, and community must all get under the load. It cannot be done by a clever or overworked president, or even by a dedicated faculty."

Burkholder also paid tribute to the four living presidents of Goshen College — S.C. Yoder, "who so graciously and patiently guided the college through the depression"; Ernest Miller, "who kept the college intact during World War II when men were led into various kinds of service"; Paul Mininger, "who led the college in time of rapid growth and social change"; and Carl Kreider, "who so ably and generously served as acting president for one year following more than 25 years as dean."

Mrs. Burkholder Speaks

In her response, Mrs. Burkholder said, "It is a privilege to have a part, indirect though it is, in the whole enterprise of higher education." Quoting Fr. Theodore Hesburgh, of the University of Notre Dame, Mrs. Burkholder agreed that students in college want not only learning and social pleasure, but also attention, affection, moral guidance, and opportunity to become personally involved in adult affairs.

"I think we must agree that interpersonal relationships and affection are important to the ongoing program of higher education. We wives who stand by can find a place in helping to contribute to the friendly and caring atmosphere of the college, the Goshen community, and the church at large."

In closing she paid tribute to the wives of the former presidents, "They have served graciously, efficiently, affectionately, and above all, sacrificially. We are deeply indebted to them for their contribution."

Shenk Gives Commission

Wilbert Shenk, president of the Mennonite Board of Education, delivered the short commissioning address. Speaking on three areas of interaction for the Christian college, he said, "The college community is well equipped to encounter and interact with the major, contemporary intellectual currents. The continual shaping and reshaping through which our world is passing is to a significant degree the product of the intellectual and cultural ferment of our time. The Christian college needs to be conversant with the great issues and the discourse which they engender. This is an exhilarating and challenging task; it is also filled with certain risks. It seems to be of paramount importance that there be Christian participation on the frontier of ideas, precisely because the questions we can ask and the values we affirm need to be seriously considered."

Second, he spoke about the interaction between Goshen College and the community of man. "The serious student will always be asking questions of society and the way it functions. He will furthermore be sensitive to the needs of the community and the part which he can play in healing the hurts, repairing the breakdown, and articulating afresh the goals for community."

He also pointed to Goshen College's roots in the Mennonite-Anabaptist stream.

"For more than 70 years," Shenk said, "Goshen College has seen its faith and values pass into the lives and experiences of students and become a dynamic extension of the college's purposes. A vital partner in the process has been the church.

"Not only has the church furnished students and financial backing, but it has also had a major part in assisting in the placement of many of these people.

Mennos Preserved For a Purpose

"In our eagerness as a people to become universal and not turn anyone off with any special identity, we've done violence to our very souls," John L. Ruth told the morning worship audience October 24.

Ruth's sermon at the College Mennonite Church was one of the first events of the Believers Church Heritage Festival observed at Goshen College October 22-31.

In his sermon, "Remembering Zion," Ruth said, "We (Mennonites) have a Zion and a Red Sea to remember. There happened in the 16th and 17th centuries a bringing out of a people with a special mentality and understanding through a special work of God.

"They were a humble and persecuted people — a people who, much like the Jews, have an inferiority complex. They think that because they're so small they ought to forget about who they are."

Look Back and Give Thanks

But it's only in looking back that one can see how God has worked on his behalf and can give extra thanks. Ruth pointed out, "Twenty-eight generations ago these people received a revelation from God and bought it at the price of their blood. They demonstrated on the fortified scenes of Europe what Christ had demonstrated with His own flesh 1600 years before.

"It seems to me pathetic, if not ironic, that Mennonite-oriented young people will grope around in the cultural grabbag and ignore their own heritage. If the Blacks have enough sense to discover what their soul is, when will the Mennonites catch on?"

Ruth urged that the "vestigial memories which are almost gone" must flower and come to birth in the consciousness of the average Mennonite today.

He said, "At no point may one worship the past. But the problem is: the person who ignores the past is ignoring a dimension of the present. We have the past more than any other dimension of time. The present is where the past and the future intersect, and that's where we're living now. To say that you're not interested in the past says that you're not interested in yourself, in consciousness, nor the future."

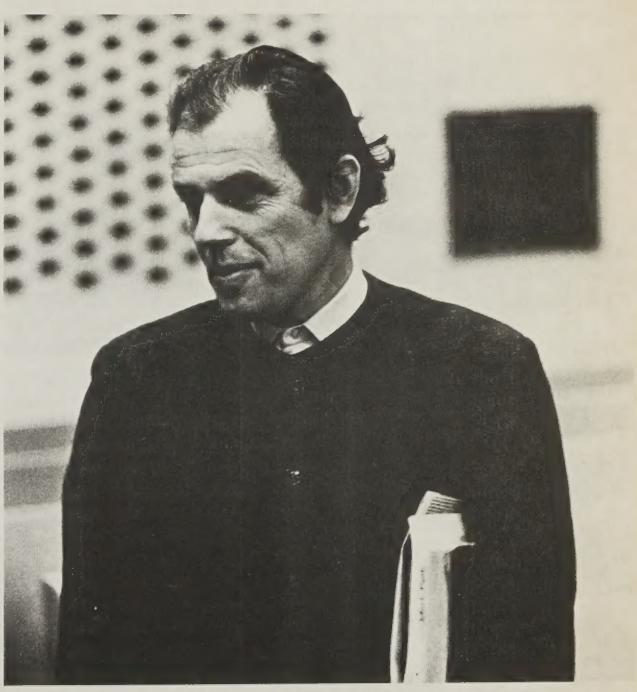
Why Are Mennos Preserved?

At the sermon's close, Ruth pondered the reason of Mennonite existence today. He said,

"I feel we have been preserved to say something effective in the 20th and 21st centuries. I don't think we've been preserved in our cultural thermos bottle for 2 1/2 centuries in the New World to do what other people are doing.

"We've been preserved to say something right out of the late medieval ethos, just when the printing press hit and ideas flowed and people read the Bible and said, 'Yes, it's different. We're to be like Christ. Christianity is not a thing of thought and writing about it. It's being another kind of person.'

"When the world finally gets on to this, who will they look back to in European history, who at the cost of their lives first said, 'You don't have to kill your neighbor'?"



John L. Ruth, on campus at the beginning of Festival week, also spoke on "Christopher Dock: Fact and Legend" and introduced "The Quiet in the Land," the film he produced.

In spite of their obvious commonality of purpose, the mood of the college-church relationship has had its ups and downs. Like any human relationship, this one is a complex of many factors.

"There needs to be integrity and mutual respect, but I suggest that the relationship will be at its most fruitful, not when we are most self aware of it, but when church and college focus together on the larger purpose for which they both exist — our mission in the world."

Audience Takes Part

Part of the program was set aside for persons in the audience to express their joy, anticipation, and expectations for the future. Speaking were Lois Gunden Clemens, senior member of the Goshen College Board of Overseers; Charles W. Ainlay, representative of the local business community; Maynard Brubacher, a sophomore; Ross Bender, dean of the Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries; Chester Lehman, former dean of Eastern Mennonite College and Seminary; Russell Krabill, moderator of Indiana-Michigan Mennonite Conference and pastor of Prairie Street Mennonite Church; Art DeFehr, GC graduate of '65 and businessman in Winnipeg, Manitoba; Myron Augsburger, president of Eastern Mennonite College; Vernon H. Schmidt, GC graduate of '39 and materials and standards engineer in Cheswick, Pa; Albert J. Meyer, executive secretary of the Mennonite Board of Education; and Laban Peachey, president of Hesston College. Carl Kreider, provost, was moderator and closed by reading a letter from S. C. Yoder, who could not be present.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Moser, Wooster, Ohio, and daughter Janice, a GC junior, were among the many to meet President Burkholder at the reception after the tree planting on Inauguration Day. The informal social hour, in the Union gym, included performances by student groups, solos, folk dancing by international students, a pottery-making demonstration, an exhibit of informal pictures of the new president, and fresh cider and doughnuts. One person commented, "There was no stuffiness about the day."

Other high lights of the program were "Fanfare for Inauguration," written by Philip K. Clemens based on the Alma Mater and performed on horn, organ, trombone, and trumpets, and a performance by the Collegium Musicum of "What God Ordains Is Always Good" by Pachelbel.

A. E. Kreider, assisted by Bruce Botts and Miss Mary Ann Halteman, both students, read a psalm of praise and offered the prayer of invocation. Choral reading selections from Isaiah, Matthew, Menno Simons, and Ernest E. Miller were given by a student group.

Mennos Laugh But Joke's on Them

"Many Mennonite young today forsake the fellowship that opens homes and spare rooms to them on four continents to seek out communes — or Kiwanis Clubs, if they enter the business world."

So said John Ruth in his convocation, "The Joke of the American Mennonite Soul," at Goshen College on October 25. He spoke to an audience of about 900 students and faculty.

The "easy camaraderie" they find is "of a far inferior quality" to what they have left behind, Ruth said. Their behavior is one of the ironies in what is happening among the descendants of the Mennonites in the 1970's.

"On the other side of the ledger, Mennonites get tired of their a cappella singing, and they purchase electronic organs with the most atrocious sound qualities. Something that is exquisite and unique in American life they laugh at and throw down the drain and then pull in something that everybody has and do an inferior version of it."

He continued, "It's amazing how some young people can go back to nature foods and fads and make a big deal of it when we have a fantastic food tradition only a generation back.

More Ironies in Behavior

"Or you can see people getting ashamed to practice the Holy Kiss. But the funny thing is: we Mennonites give up the Holy Kiss and then hunt around for sensitivity sessions and sing songs like 'Touch Me, Feel Me,' and that kind of thing."

Ruth told the story of a young Mennonite girl who told him her parents were repressive, she had to get away from home, and she wanted to marry a boy who lived at the other end of the conference. Ruth told her not to get married out of reaction, but it was too late. The bishop granted permission, Ruth married them, and they went off to the university.

A few years later, the husband sat in Ruth's living room and said that everything went fine until they had an English professor who recommended a book that questioned why any person should limit his love to only one person. The husband told Ruth that love is the greatest thing, should be shared, not be narrowed, and that finally his wife gave him permission to share his love with another woman, and she later shared her love with another man. Then all of a sudden it blew up.

Ruth commented, "I wanted to laugh at him. Coming out of the tradition he did, with all its folk wisdom, dependability, integrity of human relations, and then he took up this trash. He thought he was discovering something new, but it had been tried and it has failed for generations in history."

He asked, "So who is the joke on, anyway?"

Mennonites Lacked Faith And Became Rip Van Winkles

Ruth said, "God did a marvelous thing in the 16th century in Europe. a new freedom, creativity, and joy arose. New paths for the human spirit were mapped out. But Europe, in general, lacked the faith, the spiritual nerve, to walk in these paths. The Mennonites, the descendants of Europe's Anabaptists, then became Europe's and America's spiritual Rip Van Winkles.

"The events in Europe formed a certain kind of soul. In their accumulation, they formed a tradition. This now has passed through a number of stages, including a very quiescent one."

Ruth said he was fortunate to be able to observe some of the piquant absurdities that have developed as the Mennonites emerge now "out of the woods rubbing their eyes."

Soul Now Stirring To Life

"The joke of the American Mennonite soul is: in the very moment when this soul is being stirred to life and released for new possibilities of testimony and worship, some of Zion's sons are finding its quaint country manners very funny.

"The twist of the joke is that those doing the laughing are turning out to be the butt of the joke."

Carpenter, poet, boat builder, and a man close to the outdoors is Nicholas C. Lindsay (right), writer of the litany used during Believers Church Festival. He is sponsor of GC's Pinch Penny Press and teacher of the experimental freshman depth study of Edisto Island, South Carolina.

Litany Focuses on Renewal and Healing

"A Litany of Renewal and Healing," written and directed by Nicholas C. Lindsay, was performed in the Church-Chapel on October 26 as one of the high lights of the Believers Church Heritage Festival.

Lindsay, assistant professor of English and poet in residence at GC since 1969, produced a litany full of symbolism. One person described it as "an allegory of condensed human history," with the cycle beginning at fruitfulness, then leading to wastefulness and barrenness, and ending with a new fruitfulness, "a redeemed society." The work draws on scripture throughout, because as Lindsay says, "The scripture has many ways of saying the same thing."

The litany makes use of the metre and tune from a chain gang song of the 1930's. Also from the Black U.S. culture is a customary ritual definition of Christ's people which is used in the author's home, Edisto Island, South Carolina. The island is a Christian community of 2250 Blacks, 250 whites and a group of "brass ankle" people with a mixed ancestry of German, African and Indian. It has inherited much from aristocratic African social forms. Because of its isolation, many of these forms have continued the same on both sides of the Atlantic.

Opens with Celebration

The work opens with the celebration of the Israelites as they return joyfully from exile to find the earth of Palestine suddenly miraculously fertile. From the Song of Solomon Lindsay affirms that our Redeemer lives:

"She: I am the rose of Sharon,
The lily of the valleys.
"He: As a lily among the thistles,
So is my love among the maidens.
"She: As an apple tree among the trees of the orchard,
So is my Beloved among the men.
In his longed-for shade I am seated
And his fruit is sweet to my taste.
He has taken me to his banquet hall,
And the banner he raises over me is love."

Quickly the scene changes, however:

"She: I opened to my Beloved,
But he had turned his back and gone!
My soul failed at his flight.
I sought him but I did not find him,
I called to him but he did not answer.
The watchmen came upon me
As they made their rounds in the City.
They beat me, they wounded me,
They took away my cloak,
They who guard the ramparts."

Because it isn't fair for God to run the universe this way, the complaint of Jeremiah rises:

"Why is it that the wicked live so prosperously?
Why do scoundrels enjoy peace?
You plant them, they take root,
And flourish, and even bear fruit."

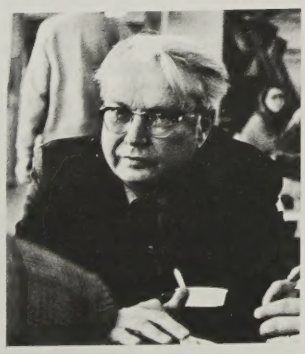
Man Has Wasted the Land

The lines are the beginning of Lindsay's comment on modern industrial and city man who has wasted and exploited the land, and put the common man in a fix:

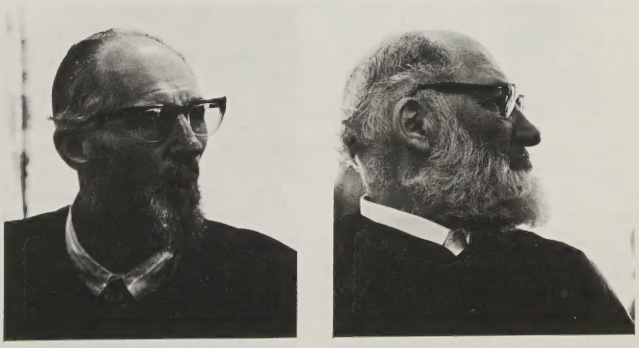
"Congregation: I ain't got no home, I'm just a roaming round,
Just a rambling worker and I go from town to town,
The rich man got my home and he drove me from my door,

Many Speakers in Festival Week

Jan Gleysteen, using his up-to-date collection of Anabaptistica, gave an illustrated lecture on the Anabaptist heritage. Twenty-three college personnel spoke in as many area churches on October 24 on the importance of a believers church. Leonard Gross, Mennonite archivist, gave an illustrated lecture on "Mighty George: The Stamp of an Anabaptist Martyr." Other speakers are at the right and elsewhere in this issue. Space did not permit coverage of every speech.



Grant M. Stoltzfus, sociologist, spoke on religion in Russia, Amish and compulsory education, and U.S. alternative system origins.



Paul Gross (left), and Paul Walter, Hutterite elders from Washington and Montana, reported on bruderhof life. They also told of a commune of Filipino nationals and another of Japanese nationals. Leaders of both have looked to the Hutterite colony as a base for founding their own.

And I ain't got no home in this world any more.

"Preacher: The land is desolate.
The blossoms are pressed dry in leaves of forms,
The babies pressed in books of government forms.
Our ruler has lost his virtue; the air is full
Of disorder, madness and of murder;
This land is desolate.

"Reader: There was a king in a land beyond the seas,
He rose up, he went to war and killed his neighbor.
He seized his daughter, he baptized her by force.
They made a good church wedding, but she was silent.
He embraced his bride, but she would not conceive;
Barren she remained. And from this time
The whole land lay afflicted: crops and men.
No seed grew, no, nor cows nor pigs dropped young.
The waters of the earth dried up; there was no rain:
The land was desolate."

From the Old Testament comes the age-old cry, not unknown in the 20th century, that the people have forgotten God and God is dead.

Song of Springtime

The low point reached, there is a song of possible springtime, to set the stage for the quest for a better era, a renewal of society. It is performed antiphonally:

"Left (with optimism throughout): I made city wages in 57
"Both (in unison): Oh, oh, oh;
"Right (with grimness, throughout): Yes, they roll the women like they work the men
"Both: Oh, oh, oh.
"Left: I think there's new sugar in these valleys?
"Both: Oh, oh, oh;
"Right: No, they ground it into money and molasses.
"Both: Oh, oh, oh.
"Left: A new day coming, a new day here —
"Both: Oh, oh, oh;
"Right: The waters must wait till the spring of the year
"Both: Oh, oh, oh."

A three-part litany of the seed people follows. They are known as the "seed" for it is from them the future will spring and blossom. No longer will society have a heart of rock and stone that misuses the land and refuses to call on God. The seed people will have hearts of flesh and blood, and want to cure the land.

Ritual Uses Symbols

The work moves quickly to the Central Ritual, which ends with the rejoicing of the healed land. In the ritual, an emotionally moving experience to observe and take part in, are the symbols of a lance, a cup, and a plate.

"Questioner: (From near door) Will I play that part? Is that my job?
"Preacher: (Motions him to read the tag on the javelin)
"Questioner: (Reads) 'Behold what it is to be a man:
This lance is called the Bleeding Lance.'
"Young Woman: (Comes from side door by the front with a Chalice in her hands. She doesn't present it directly to the Questioner, but rather to his attention, and curtsies once while holding it up.)
"Questioner: What is this cup?
"Preacher: (Motions him to read what is written on the cup)
"Questioner: (Reads) 'Behold what it is to be a woman:
This cup is called the Chalice.'
"Questioner and Young Woman: (They kneel, touch foreheads to earth while holding hands, cup and lance in the off hand. They pick up a big platter of bread and take it to the parts of the congregation; a loaf starts back through each section. They return to upstage center on the podium.)
"Preacher: (Presents Questioner with a loaf, Questioner breaks off a piece and gives it to Young Woman. Preacher then presents loaf to her and she breaks off a piece and gives it ot Questioner. The two stand side by side in this place and hold hands during the rest of the ceremony, without relinquishing their emblems.)
This lance is called the Bleeding Lance. It is made to draw blood. But it is itself bleeding.
"Reader: This lance, what is it?
"Preacher: (He pronounces the words, then motions for congregational response)
What it is to be a man.
"Congregation: What it is to be a man.
"Preacher: This cup holds blood, wine, milk
Which it receives, holds it
So long as it is itself not broken.
"Reader: This cup, what is it?
"Preacher: What it is to be a woman.
"Congregation: What it is to be a woman.
"Preacher: This plate feeds the congregation
So long as he and she carry it,
With their hands, and spirit and desire.
"Reader: This plate, what is it?
"Preacher: What it is to be a people.
"Congregation: What it is to be a people."

Ends with Exuberance

There then breaks out an exuberant, spirited rejoicing, and afterwards the singing of the German hymn of praise and adoration, "God Himself Is with Us," and the benediction.

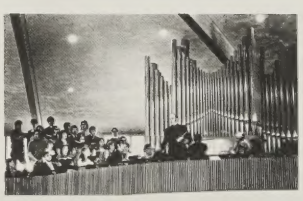
Lindsay wrote in "The Rejoicing," portraying the redeemed society:

"There is a high flying among the rice birds of the Potomac,
And the valleys of the Ohio
Are singing songs;
There is a dancing in the sugar cane along the Mississippi,
And the great Colorado mountains
Clap their hands;
The wheat of the Dakotas is rejoicing,
And the cornfields of Indiana
Laugh aloud;
There is a stir among the diligent ants of Manitoba,
And the termites of Carolina
Have quit their crying;
For the trailers and tents have turned again into houses,
And God is with us,
And there is a stop to grief and wandering,
And God is with us,
For the seed people have returned again to the place where their hearts are buried,
Planted themselves in the earth of their hearts' delight.
The land has been made real by a man and a woman.
The land is healed.
A people's delight has made their kisses into churches
And the touch of their hands into a commerce of no money coins
For God is with us."

Music Tradition Is Upheld in Week

True to its tradition, GC encouraged music during the Festival. A 15-minute hymn sing opened the service of inauguration. The Chamber Orchestra of the Saar performed a concert the evening of October 28. Other music groups are pictured at the right.

Other events in the arts included exhibits of 17th and 18th century etchings and drawings from Mennonite Library and Archives of Bethel College, Newton, Kans., and paintings by Jerry Bontrager, a 1966 GC grad.



Lon Sherer and the Collegium Musicum led from the Church-Chapel balcony the final hymn at the service of inauguration and then performed "What God Ordains Is Always Good" by Pachelbel. One out-of-town visitor remarked, "It was a majestic finale to a celebration marked by simplicity and unpretentiousness."

The Ebony Voices was a student group performing at the inaugural reception in the Union gym. Among the other performers were Marvin Graber, a blind student from Loogootee, Ind., who plays harmonica and guitar at the same time, and Roy Hodgson, a student from Nicaragua who sings and plays piano.

Mary Oyer directed two performances of the Martyrs Mirror Oratorio on Oct. 31. The "fish-eye" photo shows the adult choir on the platform (the College Church choir plus singers from several congregations nearby) and the children's choir on the right front benches.

Catholics Call for Anabaptists' Help

"The place where the Catholics have the most to learn is from the Free Churches, and above all, the Anabaptist tradition," according to Dr. William Storey, of the University of Notre Dame.

Storey, professor of church history and a scholar of the medieval period, spoke to students and faculty in a morning convocation at Goshen College during the Believers Church Heritage Festival.

"I'd like to ask for your help," Storey pled. "I hope you could extend us a helping hand in our present effort. We are a great big, unwieldy, old fashioned, encrusted Church. We need the help of many people's experience.

Free Church Is Needed

"We need particularly the experience of the people of the Free Church, so that they will help us all, conservatives and liberals, and warn us where we could make our worst mistakes.

"We would like above all, and I say this with great sincerity, to have you forgive us for our past. We have made a lot of mistakes. We made the horrifying mistake in the 16th century of rejecting the Anabaptists and of persecuting them.

"I think you are Christian enough and understanding enough to realize in many ways that the Catholic church is now in the process of recognizing its terrifying error, and wishes to redress it.

"I hope therefore you will forgive us our past and forgive us our stupidities in the present and wish us well. I hope you can pray for us. And I suspect that before too long we shall be able to pray together."

Re-union with Other Churches

Explaining recent actions of the Second Vatican Council, Storey said it was concerned with the possibilities of re-union with other Christian churches.

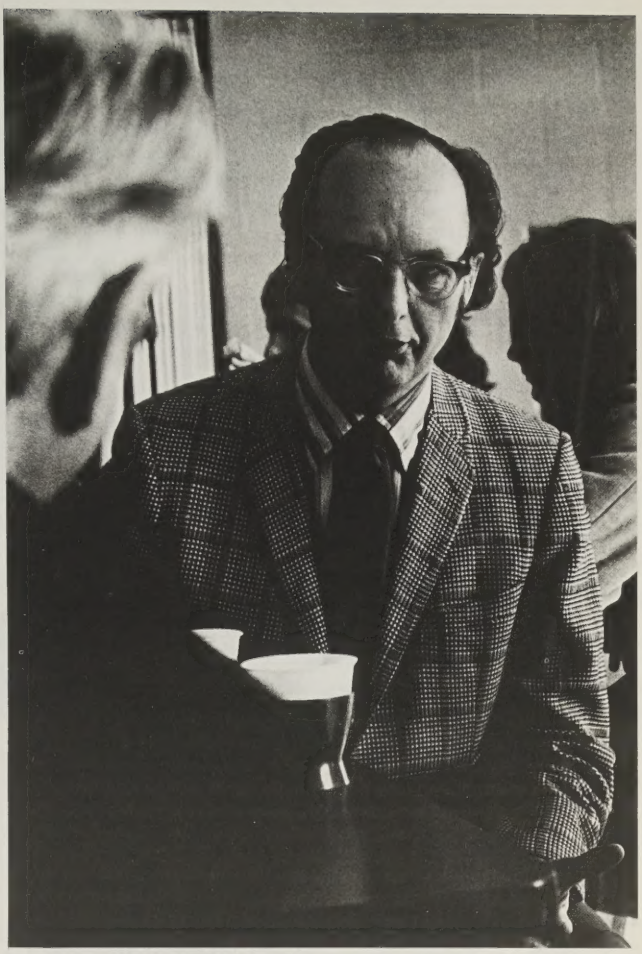
"The Council produced a new understanding and a new respect for the Christian values of other churches, and it understood the Catholic claim to be the one true church of Jesus Christ in a much more tolerant and tolerable way. It realized that the truth comes in many fashions, and that frequently, if Catholics are willing to listen and learn, they will discover Catholic values which have been preserved much more vividly and in much better fashion in other churches, and above all, perhaps, in the Free Churches.

"I think there is very little for Catholics to learn from the old established religions of Europe, whether Anglican, Lutheran, or Calvinist," he added.

Storey mentioned a handful of significant ways the Catholics wish to "redress the balance in an imbalanced church."

Renewal of Worship Significant

First was the renewal of worship. "It's no secret to anyone," Storey said, "that Roman liturgy became ossified and frozen in the forms of the past. The liturgy, over the course of 1500 years of its particularly Roman formation, had become cluttered, complicated, difficult. It practically took a university course in liturgy to be able to find yourself around in a normal Sunday mass. Preaching suffered as a result. Singing and responsive sharing in the worship had suffered even more.

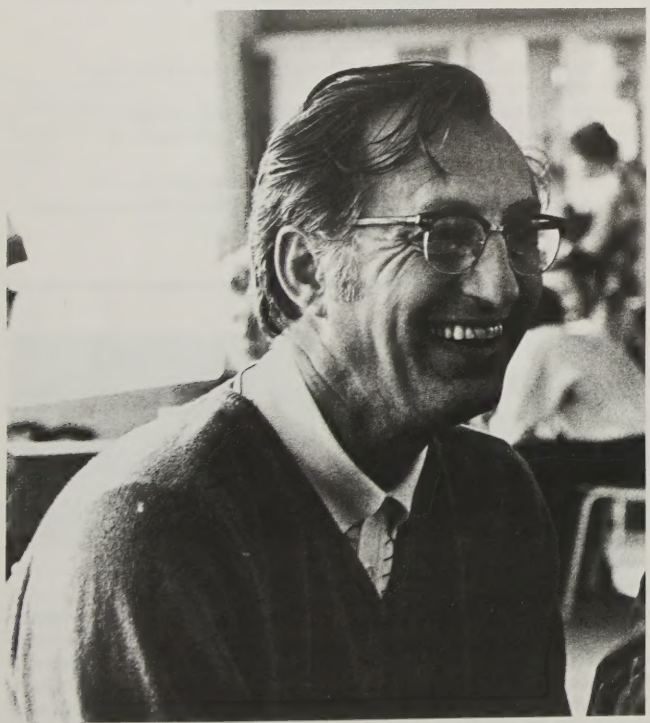


William Storey, medievalist scholar and church history professor at University of Notre Dame, spoke during Believers Church week.

Some of the sacramental rites, above all baptism and the Lord's Supper, were seriously hindered. Their meaning as congregational events was terribly obscure.

"Everywhere all over the world today the various Catholic churches are producing a liturgy in their own language. The renewal of worship is very significant; it's a renewal not just of set patterns, but also of spontaneous, free prayer.

"Everywhere in the Church there is a new emphasis on spontaneity; the Holy Spirit is communicated to all believers and on the basis of faith, conversion, and baptism. The Spirit is not communicated primarily to priests, not even primarily to the Pope, but to the whole church, and the charisma of the Spirit is available on all levels."



C. Norman Kraus, professor of religion at GC, is director of the Center for Discipleship, which sponsored the Believers Church week events.

Believers Church Is Open to All Races and Nationalities

"When the radicals of the 16th century reintroduced the idea of the believers church after it had been dead for 1000 years, they earned the epithets, 'fanatis,' 'heavenstorners,' and 'Anabaptists.'"

C. Norman Kraus, professor of religion and director of Goshen College's Center for Discipleship, contrasted the "rebaptizers" with the more conservative, establishment-minded reformers like Martin Luther, Ulrich Zwingli, and John Calvin, in his convocation address on October 28. His title was "Fanatics and Heavenstormers," or "Who Really Belongs to the Believers Church?"

Kraus said, "All the reformers revised the Lord's Supper. But none of them felt free to question radically the practice of infant baptism."

Brotherhood for All Is Radical

The radical issue the Anabaptists raised was brotherhood — koinonia, agape, love and sharing — open to all alike and on the same basis to "Turk, Jew, Christian, or in 20th century terms, Communist, nigger, and us white folks."

He pointed out, "I am convinced that a good deal of Luther's and Zwingli's actions were responses of fear." The Anabaptists believed one became a part of the church simply by a personal decision to support loyally the brotherhood. But this idea had been dead so long that when it reemerged in the 1500's it could be viewed only as fanaticism.

"Belonging to the church of Jesus Christ doesn't depend upon the privilege of birth, circumstances of history, or whether you come from India, China, Africa, Europe, Russia, the United States, or South America. No, it depends on a common allegiance.

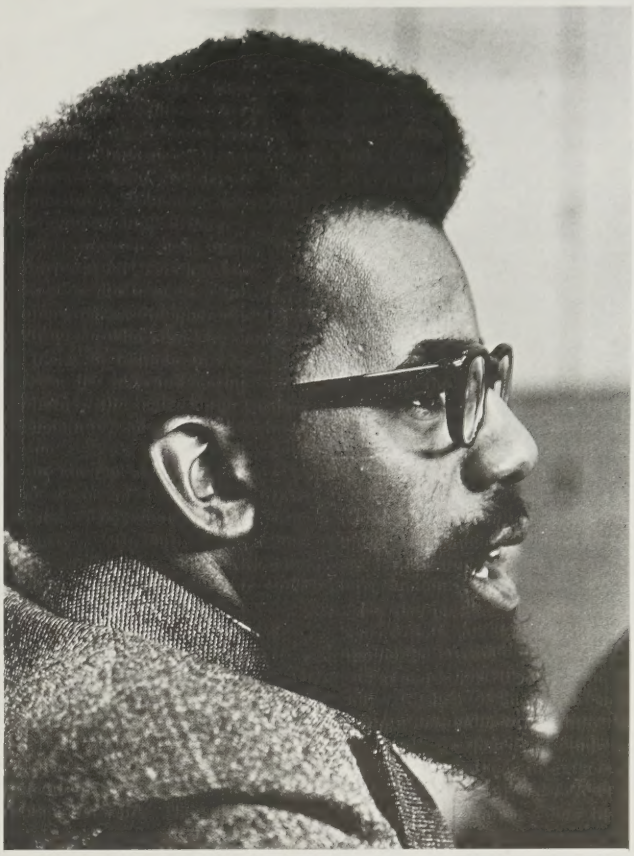
Black Theology Is Theology of the Oppressed

"The Mennonites need a theology that identifies with people suffering in unjust situations who have no way of making themselves heard," according to Hubert Brown, Urban League leader, poet, and former pastor.

Brown, a 1971 graduate of Goshen College, preached on "The Anabaptist Christ and the Black Jesus" in Campus Church Sunday morning, October 31. The west half of Union Auditorium was filled to capacity for the service, which included several songs by the Ebony Voices.

"The church should be the voices of those who have none," Brown said. It should work to liberate the oppressed, the exploited, and the brutalized.



Hubert Brown, former pastor in Pennsylvania and Ohio, toured Europe last summer to visit points of interest in Mennonite-Anabaptist history.

Black Theology Redefines Jesus

Brown pointed out that a Black theology has arisen because "no white theologian has ever taken the oppression of Blacks as a point of departure for analyzing God's activity in contemporary America. Black theology realizes that when a society performs ungodly acts against the poor in the name of God there may come a time when the oppressed might have to renounce all claims in that kind of God."

The Blacks learned about this God in history, Brown said, when "Bibles were exchanged for African land, tracts were passed out while African gold was stolen, hymns were sung while African diamonds were extracted, brutal slave captains sang of Him enroute to the New World with a cargo full of slaves, and our women saw His picture on the wall while they were being raped."

Today, this God is seen by the Blacks "putting His blessings on white superiority, affirming their oppression, praising white history, supporting Black enslavement, blessing corporate profits, approving white bigots as heroes."

Brown said that Black theology redefines God in Christ — in Blackness. "Today we must insist that there be a Black Messiah or African Christ. We must affirm the need for open door theology that makes Christ the Christ of all men, their Redeemer, Leader, and Liberator."

Mennonites can begin to develop a minority theology by recovering their spiritual past and taking sides with the oppressed. The radical behavior of their Anabaptist ancestors who in their time were the oppressed, points to how they must live today.

"We all are a minority," Brown said, who is a Black Mennonite from the Franconia conference. "Our theology must be distinctly woven together even though our past represents two separate experiences.

Anabaptist - Black Differences

"The Anabaptists who immigrated to this land came to escape tyranny and seek religious freedom. Africans came not by choice but because the last vestiges of their freedom had been wiped out.

"The sons and daughters of Menno arrived in the New World seeking new ways to exploit the full potential of their humanity. The Africans came under conditions which denied even their basic humanity.

"For the white Mennonite, America was to be a land of the free. But for the African, America was to mean 300 years of slavery, segregation, then integration, and now subtle racism."

Church Is God's Suffering People

Brown said the church has an important relationship with minorities.

"To me the church is that people called into being by the power and love of God to share in the liberation of man. The church consists of people who have been seized by the Holy Spirit and have the determination to live as if all depends on God. It has no will of its own, only God's will. It has no duty of its own, only God's duty.

"The church is not bounded by standards of race, class, or occupation. It is not a building or an institution. It is not determined by bishops. Rather, the church is God's suffering people."

Believers Church Is for All Races and Nationalities

"Blood and nationality had dominated the church of Jesus Christ and the Anabaptists challenged this myth. They asked a very radical question: 'Is blood really thicker than the water of baptism?'"

Kraus recalled two personal experiences that gave the believers church fresh meaning and significance to him.

Blacks Welcome 'White Devil'

In 1964, at the peak of the civil rights movement, he was in Atlanta, Ga., for a seminar with Black students. One of the few whites there, he was confronted by a Black Muslim after a session who called him a "white devil" to his face.

Kraus commented, "He said it to me without any particular emotion; I guess that's what hit me so hard. Then the Black Muslim said, 'Well, you know, I don't mean any harm. You can't help it.'"

Kraus also reported, "In contrast, a week later, I was in a church of a Black congregation on the outskirts of Albany, Ga., for a Monday night civil rights rally. We prayed, we sang, we strategized, we worked. But the thing that struck me was that as a white man, I was the enemy and had no right to be there. But this was different. I was in the church of Jesus Christ, and these Black people claimed me, allowed me, accepted me. That's what the believers church is all about.

"On that same trip I sat in the study in the back of the Ebenezer Baptist Church with Ralph Abernathy. What Ralph said I'll never forget: 'The Black church has saved American Christianity. The white church has become apostate. That is, it has denied its very nature as church because it has drawn its membership lines in color. The Black churches never did that.'"

Kraus, a native of Virginia, remarked, "I grew up in the South, and I had to reflect a minute. I knew he was right. He was talking believers church."

Believers Church Is Worldwide

Recalling an experience in Brussels, Belgium, last summer with Missionary David Shank and Mrs. Shank, Kraus said the believers church isn't just in America.

"We visited a small Roman Catholic communal group on the industrial side of Brussels. This community is trying to represent Jesus Christ and be a reconciling community. At about 12:00 suddenly Fr. Leon, who had been talking with us through David, acting as translator, said, 'Will you please pardon me? I must say the noon mass.' And we said, 'Of course. May we go along?'

"There were three local persons in the grotto with us four protestant Americans. Fr. Leon got into his off-white cotton cassock and readied himself to do a very informal mass. He asked my missionary friend to read the scripture and translate the comments he himself made about the significance of the Lord's Supper and our unity in Christ.

"When it came time for the breaking of the bread, the three local persons from whom we were taking our clues stood up. I decided for myself, without looking around at the other three of our group, I'm going to stand too. But all four of us stood as a unit. And we took communion at the hands of Fr. Leon.

"After the service was over, I told David to thank Fr. Leon for being a channel of God's grace to me that day. His face lit up and I didn't need any translation to get the answer. Because the word 'reciprocal' is very much alike in French and English."

Kraus closed, "It's a wonderful thing to belong to the church of Jesus Christ. You identify simply by commitment and loyalty to a common Lord. That's the believers church we're struggling for and laying aside all the walls and accouterment — to come together before Jesus Christ."

Computer Installed For Student Use

A desk-top computer, the Hewlett-Packard 2100A, is being installed in GC's Science Hall this month for instructional purposes and use by students and faculty.

William F. Miller, assistant professor of physical science, is director of computer services.

Just released in December, the new equipment replaces an older model, used heavily since August. Input currently comes from two teletype units. However, six more units can be accommodated.

Programming language in use is BASIC, which uses ordinary words and math symbols. BASIC can be learned quickly by students and teachers for problems and calculations.

Miller said the significance of the system is its possibility to be expanded to as many as 64 teletype units. It could accommodate wide and significant student and faculty use as well as data processing for official college purposes. Expansion, however, depends on gift funds for the necessary equipment.

GC will offer its first trimester-length courses in computer operations next fall.

Students Give to Pakistan

Students raised $4399.32 for East Pakistan refugees at a relief auction, by skipping meals, collecting money on downtown corners, and doing odd jobs Nov. 15-20.

Soccer Team Wins Berth in NAIA National Playoffs

GC goalie John Miller prevents a Spring Arbor score in the NAIA area semifinals. GC won 2-0, advanced to the area finals, and won it, 1-0.

As the Bulletin went to press, the Maple Leafs were on their way to the NAIA national playoffs in soccer, at Dunn, N.C., Dec. 1-4.

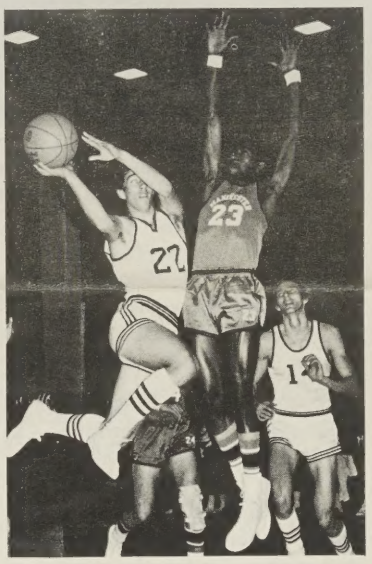
It's the first time in the school's 78 years that a GC athletic team is among the nation's top.

The eligibility to play came despite the handicaps of losing two starters and two reserves, injured in a car accident on the way to the NAIA Area IV finals at Berea, Ky. Coach John Ingold who played three junior varsity players in place of the injured against talented Berea College, said, "The team played their hearts out. It was a great team effort, particularly in the last quarter, when we had everybody playing defense." The verdict was 1-0 and sent the Maple Leafs on for national competition.

In the nationals beside Goshen were Westmont, Ottawa, Quincy, Erskine, Newark College of Engineering, Keene State, and Davis and Elkins colleges.

FLASH: The Leafs were overcome by Davis and Elkins 3-1 and subdued by Newark 6-1. Their last game was called due to a 6-inch snowfall.

In other sports news, Coach Fred Litwiller's basketball varsity won the first two games of the season against Huntington and Manchester and in the Mennonite Classic defeated Tabor. They dropped the championship game to Bethel, of Newton, Kans., however, by 17 points.



Glenn Miller (22), GC spark plug, had 22 tallies to make the Nov. 22 score against Manchester 76-60.

Auxiliary to Give Woman's Touch

A women's work auxiliary to give "the woman's touch" to the campus is being organized by Mrs. J. Lawrence Burkholder and Mrs. Carl Kreider.

Final details are being worked out this month, and women from Goshen area congregations and local community will be given a chance to add their names to the list of volunteers.

Among the projects will be sewing and help in redecorating, like new curtains for the college cabin. Kenneth King, director of physical plant, said he hopes the women will also help put in flower beds next spring.

Not all the work will be for women. There will be some projects for husbands to help on, too, according to King.

The auxiliary will build upon the work of a small number of women who met informally this fall to repair drapes and do transplanting and cleaning in the planters in the snack shop and Union and Westlawn lounges.

Scholarships Set Up In Memory of the Sommers

Goshen College has received gift funds in memory of Daniel J. and Lizzie Sommers, longtime residents of Kokomo, Ind., and members of the Howard-Miami congregation, to set up an endowed scholarship fund.

The family and children of the Sommers chose a scholarship fund to perpetuate the testimony of the lives of the late Mr. and Mrs. Sommers and their "deep concern for the cause of the Kingdom of Jesus Christ, both at home and abroad."

The scholarships will assist deserving, needy students preparing for the ministry, missions, or related Christian service.

Goshen College Bulletin
Vol. LXV. No. 6. December, 1971

The mood at Goshen:

Gratitude and expectation . . .

Gifts for the trees planted on inauguration day bought 162 more than the 130 that were planted. (Don't worry. The campus plan calls for 400.)

Students raised a whopping $4399.32 for East Pakistan's refugees. They skipped meals, collected money on street corners, did odd jobs for townspeople, and ran a relief sale. It all happened in just one week's time.

Several GC alumni offered to give $500 to $1000 toward expenses for the soccer team to play in the NAIA national tourney at Dunn, N.C., December 1-4.

Alumni, in many cases, are increasing their gifts to the Annual Fund. Some gifts are $50 to $100 more than last year. Many are doubling last year's gift. A few have been in the range of $900 to $1000 more.

We hope you don't mind if we show our thanks in this way. We think there's a growing spirit of loyalty at GC. And it seems to be contagious.

That brings us to the point of this message. We'd like all of you to catch the Goshen spirit.

You can support scholarships, library, art department, athletics, or other projects in the operating program. Whatever you choose.
Think about it.
